Decked out in their dress whites, Belleau Wood crew waits patiently while tugs try the impossible

Canadians-only policy for farm lands in B.C.

B.C.'s agricultural Crown lands will be sold only to Canadians, Lands Minister Jim Chabot announced Wednesday.

The minister would not elaborate on the new policy when asked if the government will move to bar the ownership of other B.C. land by non-Canadians.

"This is a start. What you have asked me is part of a bigger issue and that is a different story."

He also would not say what the government intends to do in other ownership areas, such as recreational land.

The new program will start with sale of 15,000 hectares of Crown farmland to be sold by auction on a lease-to-purchase basis. Sixty-five of the parcels are in the Peace River area with 10 in the Cariboo and one in the south Okanagan.

Under the new policy, successful bidders will have to develop 25 per cent of the land within five years. Under a previous lease-to-purchase system the requirement was that the lessee develop 80 per cent in 10 years; after which the lessee gains title.

Chabot said, "When the conditions have been met and title is given there will be an encumbrance placed on the land that will be registered in land registry offices. The condition, which will be there for all time, will allow only re-sale of the land to Canadians.

"I want to ensure that control of these agricultural lands remains in Canadian hands."

He also said if the land is not already in the agriculture land reserves "it will all be placed there to protect it."

Chabot said he expects there will be two offerings of agricultural land a year in different parts of the province, each about the same size as the first 15,000 hectares.

"For example, I expect to make an offering next year of around 20,000 hectares just in the Fort Nelson area of the Peace River.

Successful bidders will pay a rental fee to the government of one per cent a year on the appraised value, but if the lessee fails to make his 25-per-cent improvements in five years, the rent escalates to five per cent on a new appraised price, Chabot said.

"In other words, we are saying perform or get out. If the improvements are not made in 10 years he loses the land."

Another change is modification of the rule that restricted disposal of the land only to established farmers.

The minister said the new policy will provide an opportunity for all farmers, including new ones, to apply.

He said the parcels will be large enough to be viable farms and the government plans to sell small parcels of Crown land adjacent to an existing farm on a preferential basis "to that owner if he wants the land and will consolidate it with what he already owns."

The same restrictive resale policy will apply for these lands as well, he said.

Prime dips again

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate dropped to 10.35 per cent today from 10.49 a week earlier, a move which could add pressure on some chartered banks to lower borrowing costs.

Anchors no way, no way . . .

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The USS Belleau Wood is capable of streaking through the seas at 24 knots with its potent strike force, but in tight quarters such as Ogden Point the mighty war vessel is at the mercy of the sea and the elements.

The sea served up a fast floodtide Wednesday afternoon while the elements dished up a stiff westerly breeze, and it was enough to prevent the amphibious assault ship (it looks like an aircraft carrier) from docking inside the breakwater.

Despite two valiant tries, five tugs — three from Seaspan International and two from the Canadian Armed Forces — couldn't deliver enough horsepower to swing the Belleau Wood's stern into the easternmost slip at Ogden Point.

After slightly more than an hour of pushing and pulling by the five tugs, the Belleau Wood headed off to anchor in Royal Roads.

The 820-foot ship currently has a crew of 1,200 officers and men and a complement of 300 marines.

According to Jane's Fighting Ships, the Belleau Wood can carry as many as 1,900 marines in addition to a wartime crew of 900.

Her flight deck can operate as many as a dozen Sea Knight helicopters at one time and the hangar deck can accommodate 30 of the attack choppers.

There is also a floodable docking well beneath the after elevator (which transports helicopters between the hangar and flight decks) which is capable of handling four large landing craft.

A large garage has enough room for a reinforced battalion.

On the docking attempt, a Pacific Pilotage Authority spokesman said, "They knew they were going to have a tough job putting her in there even before they got here.

"But they were prepared to have a go at it almost to the point of no return, and they did."

Because the ship's superstructure and bridge are on the starboard side, it was necessary to run the ship in stern first so the bridge would be on the jetty side.

Ordinary ships can come in bow first because their bridges aren't offset to one side.

A Canadian Navy source said the ship was scheduled to tie up at 1 p.m., but the pilotage authority spokesman later reported a pilot was picked up at 1:45 p.m., exactly on schedule.

When the Belleau Wood finally headed for Royal Roads, a band of official welcomers and a Canadian Forces band packed up and left.

In the meantime, the tank landing ships USS Tuscaloosa and USS Cayuga and the dock landing ship USS Fort Fisher had docked at Esquimalt and the first of some 2,500 sailors and marines hit the beaches for a Canadian weekend.

The guided missile cruiser USS William H. Standley arrived in Esquimalt this morning and the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Midgett is due Friday.

Continent's nosiest landlord?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Managers of B.C. government housing have declared themselves defenders of marriage by refusing to accept tenants who cannot provide proof of formal separation from spouses.

The new province-wide policy of the B.C. Housing Management Commission has provoked the ire of Prince Rupert city council, which has voted to send a letter of complaint to Housing Minister Jim Chabot.

"B.C. Housing Management is the only landlord in North America that won't let you move in without a note from home," Alderman Peter Purdy said Wednesday.

The new rule, as stated in the commission's policy manual, refers to applicants for public housing who are separating from their spouses and are residing in the family home.

"Provision of accommodation for one spouse without the other having full knowledge and agreement could be seen as aiding one party only in a marital separation," the manual said.

"The commission cannot be seen to assist in a marriage breakup by the provision of accommodation for one spouse wishing to separate from the other."

Purdy said in a telephone interview council took action after receiving confirmation of the policy in a letter from commission chairman Mary Kerr.

He said council inquired in the housing commission's policy after he received a phone call from a woman, separated from her husband, who had tried to apply for public housing.

The woman was told by commission staff that her application would not be approved unless she submitted a copy of a marriage separation agreement or a letter of permission from her spouse.

Purdy said the policy poses particular difficulties for those who are most likely to need low-cost housing — the woman with children abandoned by her husband and the battered wife wanting to leave.

Meanwhile, Doreen Stewart, manager of the commission's housing allocation department, said the policy was adopted three months ago.

She confirmed that married applicants separating from their spouses are required to provide evidence "to verify they have started formal action" before they can get public housing, but she could not say what the commission would accept as proof.

Wolfe car shop topping ICBC

Times News Services

An autobody repair shop owned by Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe is charging its customers a surcharge on top of the rate paid by the Insurance Corp. of B.C., while a shop owned by Social Credit party whip George Mussallem is sticking to provincial rates.

The Wolfe Chevrolet-Oldsmobile Ltd. body shop is one of several repair shops around the province which are charging as much as $5 more than the ICBC-approved rate of $26.50 an hour and are billing customers for the business.

A worker at Wolfe's company said it is charging $4.40 more an hour.

Wolfe placed holdings connected with his automobile dealership into a blind trust when appointed to the cabinet in 1975. Wolfe does not receive profits from the dealership but rent on the buildings is paid into the blind trust.

A worker at Mussallem Motors in the Fraser Valley community of Maple Ridge said Wednesday that his autobody shop had not imposed the surcharge. Wolfe and Mussallem are the only MLAs with car dealerships in B.C.

News of the Scored dealerships came shortly after The Insurance Corporation of B.C. announced it was arming all its claims offices with lists of body shops in each area that are accepting the corporation's hourly rates for repairs.

The action was initiated Wednesday to counter the growing number of body shop operators who are

U.S. orders inspections of 727, 737, DC-9 engines

By DOUGLAS FEAVER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday it has discovered a serious potential safety defect in the engine that powers two-thirds of U.S. jetliners. It ordered an intensive inspection program that could slow summertime airline operations.

In a legally binding order signed late Wednesday the FAA directed the airlines to inspect the jet engines on Boeing 727s and 737s and McDonnell Douglas DC-9s. The order covers some 4,500 engines on about 1,650 airplanes and will cost the airline industry $10 million to $20 million to carry out, FAA engineering officials estimated.

The inspection order from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration must also be followed in Canada, transport department spokesman David Austin said today.

All major Canadian airlines — including Air Canada, Canadian Pacific and Nordair — fly the McDonnell Douglas planes. They will be asked to inspect the engines within the next 100 flights.

Inspections will be required within varying amounts of time depending on the engine's age and model number.

Inspection requires removal and partial disassembly of the engine to check the suspect part or parts. If no spare engine is available, the down-time on an airplane could run from three to five days, the FAA estimated. The 727 has three engines, the 737 and DC-9 two each.

The engine, built by Pratt & Whitney, is known as the JT8D and is generally regarded as one of the most

$350,000 rip-off charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five people were charged Wednesday with more than 120 counts related to an alleged welfare fraud scheme B.C. ministry of human resources investigators estimated involved as much as $350,000 during five years.

Investigators allege a group of people using fictitious names and forged documents began receiving illegitimate welfare benefits in 1974. The spokesman said that by moving frequently between B.C. and Ontario they continued collecting payments estimated at $150,000 to $350,000.

Paul Todd, 43, and his common-law wife Arna Lee, 37, both of Vancouver, were remanded in provincial court to July 23.

Margaret Lavigne, 66, and her daughters Shirley Sulley, 42, and Joan Kaiser, 44, all of Toronto, were also expected to face charges.

Ford's price was too high

DETROIT (AP) — Gerald Ford wanted a piece of the presidency, a price Ronald Reagan wasn't willing to pay.

So the deal fell through, after negotiations between a would-be president and a one-time president over how to share the power of the Oval Office.

After weeks of vowing not to make a mistake in his first big decision as nominee, Reagan was left looking like a rejected suitor.

And George Bush was exposed as Reagan's second choice.

What happened?

Ford telegraphed his decision when he appeared in two television interviews early Wednesday evening.

Reagan and Bush: what happened?

"If I go to Washington, I have to go there in the belief that I would play a meaningful role," he said. "I would not go to Washington to be a figurehead vice-president."

And yet, the eventual decision was not made until 11:15 p.m. Detroit time when Ford, unaccompanied by anyone other than his Secret Service bodyguard, rode an elevator down from his suite on the 70th floor suite to Reagan's on the 69th.

He and Reagan, antagonists in the 1976 race for the presidential nomination, met for 10 minutes. Ford then returned to his suite and told his aides, then his wife, that it was all off.

"He looked relieved," said one aide.

At 11:37 p.m. the telephone summoned George Bush. He was offered the brass ring and took it.

On Tuesday night, a handful of Republican party elders were summoned by Reagan. They persuaded him at least to consider teaming up with Ford. Reagan replied they were not the first to advise that no one could do as much to assure his election as Ford.

Commendable charity but fish wasn't theirs

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal fisheries department will have to pay for being generous with someone else's fish, a B.C. Supreme Court judge ruled Wednesday.

What the department will have to pay is 76 sockeye salmon, delivered to the home of Rita McRae of Sardis, near Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley.

The salmon are to replace 76 fish seized when a fisheries officer in the Smithers area of north-central B.C. apprehended Ms. McRae in August, 1978. The department didn't have enough cold storage for 76 fish, so kept two for evidence purposes and sold the other 74 to the Salvation Army for $1 under established policy.

A year later, Fisheries Act charges against Ms. McRae were dropped and when she asked for her fish or compensation, the department offered her the $1.

"Just who in the department's bureaucracy was responsible for creating a policy which so magnanimously disposed of a private citizen's property was not revealed," said Mr. Justice W.J. Wallace. He said it was admitted Ms. McRae was never consulted about disposition of her property.

The judge said a fisheries officer is required to make every effort to obtain as close to the market value as possible for the property being sold.

Bills on post office, information introduced

OTTAWA (CP) — Two pieces of legislation, one that will turn the post office into a Crown corporation and one that will create a freedom-of-information act, were introduced into the Commons today.

Introduction of the bills comes one day before Parliament is expected to recess for the summer which means that they are likely to receive only approval in principle before MPs head home.

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet asked the opposition to study the post office bill over the summer so it could receive quick final approval in the fall.

The opposition House leaders said they were willing to co-operate in speeding the bill through preliminary stages in the Commons but would make no absolute guarantees to do so until they had an opportunity to study provisions of the legislation.

The freedom-of-information bill, introduced by State Secretary Francis Fox, will follow the former Progressive Conservative administration's lead in substantially reducing the type of information the government can keep secret.

Socred's shop tops ICBC rate

billing their customers a surcharge over and above the $25.60 hourly rate ICBC set last April.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said today claimants are being issued a pink slip warning them ICBC will not pay more than the set rate and advising them to verify the rate charged by the repair shop of their choice before authorizing any work.

Egby said claimants are also being told they may have trouble finding a shop that will accept the ICBC rate, and in that event the claims office is providing a list of shops that will.

He said shops are crossing the surcharge war battle line at such a rate the list is having to be updated almost hourly.

In Vancouver alone the number of shops on the list Wednesday varied from about 70 to 100.

None of the operators in Greater Victoria have begun to levy surcharges yet.

Some body shop operators are crying foul, accusing ICBC of setting up a blacklist.

But Wes Wills, co-ordinator of the Automotive Retailers Association that represents about 600 of the 1,600 body shops in the province, said the action comes as no surprise.

"We fully expected it. ICBC has been manoeuvering for this for some time. They wanted it to happen. I think they are trying to psychologically prepare the public for big rate hikes next year and they want to find someone to blame."

He said that by limiting the number of approved shops, ICBC may wind up creating a massive bottleneck.

"The shops can't handle the volume of business as it is."

Egby said the majority of body shops are accepting the rates.

But Wills said an ARA survey of 300 shops in the Lower Mainland this week showed 94 per cent favored the surcharge action.

The reason more haven't joined is "we've a lot of fence-sitters in this business."

The most vocal opponents of the ICBC rates have been the union shops.

Blacks hijack school bus as Miami continues to boil

MIAMI (AP) — Simmering racial tensions entered a third day today with the commandeering of a school bus by eight blacks shortly before dawn. Overnight, two women, including a pregnant teen-ager, were shot and a policewoman was injured in the city's riot-torn Liberty City district.

"It's quiet but not everybody has gone home," police spokesman Thomas Banks said this morning. "We still have a few idiots running around out there setting small bonfires." Banks said there also had been reports of sporadic sniper fire.

At 5:45 a.m. a county school bus beginning its morning rounds was taken over by eight blacks, two adults and six juveniles, said police spokesman Ray Southerland.

They were detained at a police checkpoint in the predominantly-black Liberty City area when officers determined "the situation didn't look right."

Police found a firearm on the bus and arrested all eight people, said Southerland, but the charges were not immediately known.

The female driver, who had remained on the bus, was uninjured, he said. The unidentified driver did not have any passengers on board.

A small arson-caused blaze damaged the James E. Scott Community Centre in Liberty City early today and there was minor looting in the building, said Dade County Police Lieut. Robert Fortney. A gang of black youths also set fire to several railway ties in the area, he said.

Most of a crowd of about 150 black youths roaming the area dispersed when a teen-ager yelled, "Class dismissed!" around 11:30 p.m.

Shortly after midnight, a pregnant white woman was shot in the arm at "point-blank range" by a shotgun loaded with birdshot, officials said.

Banks said 16-year-old Fulgencia Acosta and her husband became lost on their way home to suburban Hialeah and were fired on as they stopped to ask black youths for directions.

Earlier Wednesday, black leaders called off plans to walk the streets in an attempt to calm the racial tensions in neighborhoods still in shambles from May rioting.

That rioting claimed 18 lives and caused millions of dollars in damages. On Tuesday, a white plain-clothes policeman and four other Dade County officers were shot and wounded.

Schroeder surgery in August

Legislature Speaker Harvey Schroeder will undergo open heart surgery at St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver the week of Aug. 11, the Social Credit caucus said today.

He suffered a heart attack recently and has been at home since.

Doctors said the recovery time for operations of this type are at least six weeks and could take two or three months.

His office said the Chilliwack MLA hopes to return to work this fall.

Current standings in the legislature are Social Credit 31 and New Democratic Party 26.

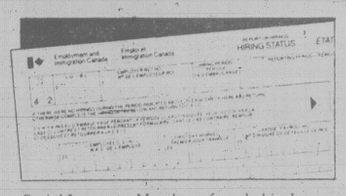
A new way to detect Unemployment Insurance abuse.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that's required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits, and start a new job, please say so on your UI claimant report card.



Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.

It takes time to all sink in DETROIT — They held a Ronny Reagan Film Festival here the other night, displaying such classics as King Rat (1938), Angels Washed Their Faces, with the Dead End Kids (1939), and, of course, the celebrated Bedtime With Bonzo (1951).

The ads specified that admission would be free to anyone showing up carrying either an empty bottle of Geritol or a box top from Grecian Hair Formula.

It would all be hilarious, except that a visitor from another country (as if from another planet) sits here looking down at all the beefy, earnest conventioneers dressed like children at a wacky birthday party and trying to let it sink in that this great nation may very well elect as president the man who was nominated Wednesday night.

Ronald Reagan, if elected — and the polls say he will be — will be 70 within weeks of his inauguration. He would be just about the age on election that a tired Eisenhower was on retirement.

The only other U.S. president close to Reagan's vintage, William H. Harrison, assumed office in 1841 at the age of 68, caught pneumonia that very day and died a month later.

There was a delightful touch in the Republican daily calendar on Wednesday, a notation that at 11:30 a.m. "any foreign press interested in discussing the American political system — call for information George Cook, 467-1640."

One wished the intrepid Mr. Cook the jolly best of luck in settling the puzzlement of the Japanese press here, the British, the German, one assumes Pravda and the Peking Daily Bugle, who must explain to their countries this man who could within six months be at the centre of world councils.

How does one explain a man who once suggested that his America should "pave Vietnam and paint it with parking stripes."

The most radical man to be nominated for president since Barry Goldwater in 1964, a champion of the virtues of the free enterprise system, a millionaire, Reagan paid no income taxes at all in 1970.

I'm not sure how Mr. Cook goes about countering the member of Reagan's Republican caucus when he was governor who said, "You could walk through Ronald Reagan's deepest thoughts and not get your ankles wet."

One keeps thinking that this phenomenon (the smug European caricature of America come true: The pretty movie star graduating to a televised presidency) can't really be true, that there must be more to Reagan than his background.

His California experience (his total formal political experience in life is the eight years in Sacramento) indicates that there is. He talks tough but is a bit of a patsy for his advisers, likes a nap in the afternoon and regards leadership as a "chairman of the board" nine-to-five operation.

One keeps thinking it's all a fantasy, that Reagan is a creation of the people who made Animal House.

How, the son of a shoe salesman who was a drunk, he graduated from Eureka College in Illinois and became famous throughout the Midwest as a sports announcer on radio station WHO (I don't make this stuff up) while "simulating" — i.e. faking — broadcasts of Chicago Cubs games.

The man who would be president and rule the world once willingly accepted a role as a bedtime companion for a chimpanzee.

Reagan plugs family virtues in his speeches. Well he might, since he is divorced — he would be the first divorced president — as JFK was the first Catholic. All four of his children are college dropouts, the older two are divorced, one of them twice. The younger daughter once lived with a member of the Eagles rock group. The younger son is a promising dancer with the Joffrey Ballet farm team; Mr. and Mrs. Reagan have never seen him perform.

What is depressing is the make-up of delegates down on the goofy, shouting pushing maelstrom of Joe Louis Arena. The shrewd Reagan strategy of capturing delegates early in the primaries and making this convention unnecessary is most obvious.

Forty per cent of these delagates earn more than $50,000, three-quarters of them are Protestant, four-fifths of them are professionals or executives or "housewives," 68 per cent of them are men.

It is not that we are in fantasy land. It is just that these secure and satisfied delegates ready to annoint a 69-year-old champion of nostalgia do not represent the reality of America.

10 Asian refugees arrive weekly

About 10 Southeast Asian refugees are coming to Victoria weekly under a federal government settlement program.

Although housing and jobs aren't immediately available the refugees are being gradually eased into the city.

Stu Beaveridge, Refugee Aid Centre co-ordinator, said Wednesday about 20 of the 70 refugees who have arrived in the last two months have settled in permanent accommodation and half the rest have places to stay.

He's still searching for appropriate, permanent accommodation for about 25.

Until this is found the federal government pays for the refugees to stay in hotels or motels.

Jobs are limited right now, said a spokesman for Canada Employment and Immigration, but employers have responded well.

She's found jobs for 36 of the refugees who have arrived since February and is looking for 22 more positions. Many of the jobs are low paying.

Employment and immigration is also doing a considerable amount of settlement work with these refugees because, unlike earlier ones who were looked after by private sponsor groups, they are on their own.

If provides assistance in getting them established in residences, helps them acquire basic furniture, clothing and food and generally helps them get settled.

Anyone interested in helping could provide hospitality services, said Beaveridge.

Anyone with time and transportation could show the refugees such things as how to use the bus system, how to shop for groceries and what a Canadian dinner is like.

"The list is endless," he said.

Offers of permanent housing, jobs or hospitality can be made by contacting the centre at 388-5580.

B.C. has accepted 4,500 refugees from Southeast Asia in the last 18 months, figures released Tuesday by the provincial labor ministry show. Canada-wide total since January 1979 is 42,000.

The provincial and federal labor ministries at the same time announced an agreement to expand the refugee resettlement program to allow 20 teenaged refugees into B.C.

$4.5B tax bonanza if coal deal made

More than $4.5 billion in taxes and other benefits will accrue to the federal and provincial governments over 30 years if a deal is reached with the Japanese steel industry over northeastern B.C. coal, a special report says.

The Price Waterhouse report, commissioned by Teck Corp. and Quintette Coal Ltd., two companies involved in the coal proposals, also said its estimate is based on development of only two of the proposed deposits.

The firms are negotiating to sell the Japanese five million tonnes of coking coal and 1.7 million tonnes of thermal coal a year.

Based on a price to the Japanese of close to $75 a tonne using 1980 capital costs, the report says in addition to benefits to the senior governments, the mines will contribute $141 million — $4.7 million a year — to municipal authorities.

"Thus, the total mine infrastructure projects should generate $4,670 million in federal, British Columbia and municipal taxes over the 30 years," the study said.

The report also noted the impact on the Canadian balance of payments and estimated there will be a net foreign exchange inflow of more than $400 million (in 1980 dollars) for each year the mines are in operation.

And, said the report, along with the 1,800 operating emloyees at the mines, indirect effects of the projects will generate "a further 2,500 to 4,000 jobs just in B.C. and between 3,000 and 4,000 in Eastern Canada.

"The effect of this should be to double the tax contributions from employment presented in this report."

Other figures listed:

— Corporate taxes and royalties: $630.3 million (Ottawa); $1.0007 billion (B.C.);

— Interest payments: $102.1 million (Ottawa); $4.8 million (B.C.);

— Railway net revenues: $678 million (Ottawa); $375 million (B.C.);

— Port revenues: $135 million (Ottawa); $15 million (B.C.).

The report also says that based on annual production of 6.7 million tonnes a year, the coal would have a value of $470 million with total value over the initial 30 years of $14 billion. This compares with estimated mines development cost in the same period of $930 million.

Annual payroll would be $45 million.

Fall tourist blitz planned

"Fall in Love Again" will be the theme of a major advertising campaign beginning next month to encourage autumn travel to and within B.C., Tourism Minister Pat Jordan said Wednesday.

"Fall is the time for people to feel the beauty of the change in nature, and what better place for people to fall in love again than in British Columbia," Jordan said.

The campaign will be aimed at British Columbians and other Canadians as well as potential tourists on the U.S. Pacific Coast.

Jordan said 787,000 U.S. residents visited B.C. in the first four months of this year, a 24.2-per-cent increase over the same period last year.

The number of overseas visitors is up 5.2 per cent to 50,800.

Double royalty jeopardy

B.C. Industry Minister Don Phillips probably meant to help his government when he threatened a two-price coal royalty system after hearing some comments he disliked from mine owner Edgar Kaiser.

In fact, he only worsened the already unstable and difficult relationship between the B.C. government and Ottawa, federal and provincial railways, coal companies operating in B.C., and Japanese steel mills.

A carefully thought out position paper on the advantages of a two-price coal system might have been of value. Instead, Philips' suggestion was made in anger and sounded suspiciously like a warning to coal barons who choose to exercise their right of free speech.

The remarks that roused Phillips' ire could not be described as revolutionary. Kaiser said that he thought it unusual and unreasonable that provincial or federal subsidies should go to northeastern coal companies and/or Japanese steel mills just to get a new coal development off the ground. A lot of British Columbians, reading estimates that the hidden subsidies could go as high as $30 per ton of coal or $150 million annually, feel the same way.

Phillips interpreted these remarks to mean that Kaiser doesn't want any coal developments in the province other than his own. It's hard to find that implication in Kaiser's words. Rather, his point seems to be that he finds it unreasonable that other coal developments should receive massive government subsidies and then compete with his company, which is paying its own way. He has a point.

He would doubtless feel even more strongly on the subject were the government to introduce the subsidies on northern coal, and then try to pay for them by double-taxing the coal coming from his southern mines. That would be the net effect of a two-price royalty system.

Philips has placed the government in an awkward position. Regardless of what arguments it might use, a move now by the government to a two price royalty system would be seen by the public as Philips' revenge against the man who dared criticize his pet project.

Meanwhile, Phillips still has not answered the very basic question Kaiser raised: should taxpayers' dollars be used to subsidize coal companies and Japanese steel mills?

Another explanation

Douglas Christie's explanation of why only eight people showed up in Winnipeg to hear him talk about the advantages of western separatism was a bit much.

The Victoria-based advocate of an international boundary along the Ontario-Manitoba line said the lack of interest was indicative of the problems facing the west. "It's because people know they don't count politically."

He said the west accounts for more than 50 per cent of the gross national product, yet has only one-third of the political power and influence. You'd think that would make them all the more interested in hearing his philosophy.

His analysis of the distribution of wealth and power may be accurate, but he would have been better able to explain his inability to draw a crowd had he read the public opinion survey undertaken by the Canada West Foundation in May.

The foundation, a private research group located in Calgary asked 582 western Canadians for their preferences on the future of the four western provinces.

One per cent of the respondants thought joining the United States as one state would be the best course.

Three per cent thought the provinces should join the United States as four separate states.

Four per cent thought they should combine to form one region separate from Canada.

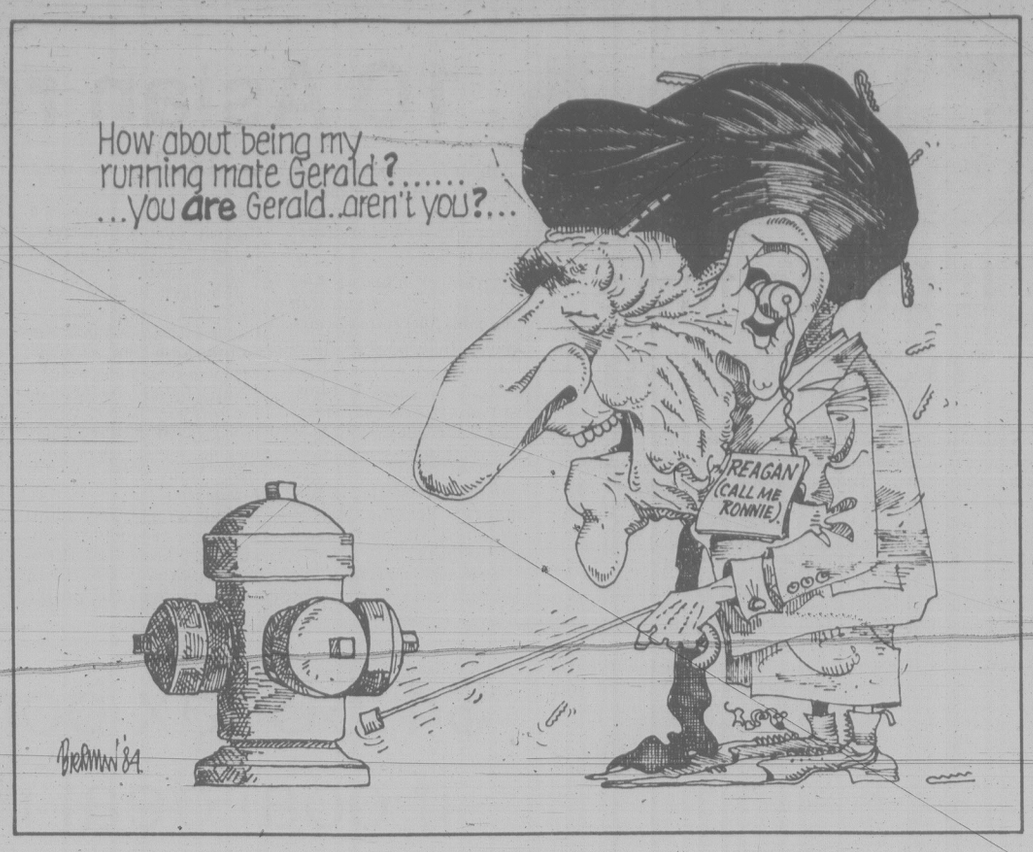
Eighty-eight per cent felt they should remain part of Canada.

Three per cent didn't know.

The foundation also found in its May survey that 70 per cent of Western Canadians believe that the west is often ignored or overlooked because of the national government's preoccupation with Ontario and Quebec.

But the foundation concluded that despite the belief of westerners that they are not treated fairly by the national government, they nonetheless have a strong commitment to Canada.

Christie may have a cause, but Winnipeggers simply weren't interested.



ANTHONY WESTELL

Split on continental trade

Two threads of concern continuously run through political affairs in Canada and compete for the attention of government.

One is relations between the English-speaking and French-speaking communities — the problem of accommodating two nations within the bossom of a single state, as a British colonial statesman observed with alarm many years ago.

The second thread is relations with the United States — the fear that the colossus next door will encroach upon political sovereignty and swamp cultural identity.

In reality, the two threads often are entwined. It is precisely the English-French duality, for example, which gives Canada an identity distinct from that of the United States and its melting pot. But the searchlight of political attention shifts from one concern to the other.

National unity

In the 1960s, the growth of U.S. investment in Canada and the popularity of U.S. TV culture were an urgent problem, at least for opinion leaders, and gave rise to what was called "the new nationalism." But with the growth of the separatist movement in Quebec in the 1970s, attention turned to the problem of preserving national unity.

This phase of national affairs probably has peaked with the May referendum in Quebec in which a surprisingly large majority refused to give to their Parti Quebecois (PQ) provincial government a mandate to negotiate for secession from confederation. This is not to say that the problem of unity has been solved, but merely that the heat is off for a few years.

Thus national attention will turn to focus on economic problems, which automatically involve relations with the United States. Like the United States, Canada is suffering from inflation, unemployment, slow growth, serious deficits in the balance of payments, a confused and divisive debate on energy policy and a manufacturing sector which finds it hard to compete in world markets.

The short-lived Conservative government — elected in May last year, defeated in February — thought the answer to these problems was to place more reliance on the free market, including the possibility of free trade with the United States. In this, it reflected its power base in the Western provinces which always have been inclined toward free trade.

In opposition, the party is likely to develop these ideas. The national president of the party already is talking about the desirability of a North American Common Market, and a former policy adviser to the party leader is promoting the concept of a "Treaty of North America" to formalize the extraordinary network of relations which already link the United States and Canada and, to a lesser extent, Mexico.

In the private sector, there has been a remarkable surge of Canadian direct investment in the United States, reflecting the fact that maturing Canadian corporations are coming to regard themselves as continental rather than national enterprises.

However, Prime Minister Trudeau's born-again Liberal government is adopting a mildly nationalistic stance. It proposes to increase Canadian participation in the oil and gas industry, which now is dominated by foreign-controlled multinationals, and to scrutinize more closely the operations of foreign (mainly U.S.)-controlled corporations in other sectors to ensure that their export, research and development and other business strategies serve the interests of Canada rather than of their parent companies.

Ministers dismiss as out of the question any talk of free trade or an energy pool. They are demanding a bigger share of the continental auto industry for Canada, at a time when the whole industry is contracting. And they intend to increase Canadian participation in the oil and gas industry from 25 to 50 percent by the end of the decade. U.S. investment still will be required, but U.S. ownership and control of the industry will be reduced.

But the Trudeau government's policies may be moderated by its urgent need to rebuild support in Canada's increasingly wealthy and populous West, where it has done very badly in recent elections. Western Liberals no doubt will be urging the party and the government to restrain its nationalism, which is mainly rooted in Ontario, ease away from protectionist policies designed mainly to assist Quebec and respond to the Westerners' free-trade and free-enterprise attitudes.

Senate involved

On the U.S. side of the border, the new factor in the relationship is the widespread but as yet little-noticed interest in continental trade, development and economic integration. A North American Trade Caucus has been formed in the Senate with influential membership. The Commerce Department has a task force studying continental trade possibilities. The National Governors' Association has urged President Carter to seek to establish a North American forum in which the United States, Canada and Mexico can meet on terms of equality to consider more cooperation.

All this probably reflects the U.S. awareness that Western Europe and Japan now are competitors rather than junior partners, and that it must look elsewhere for economic allies, resource and markets in an increasingly competitive world. Where more natural than its continental neighbors?

JAMES RESTON

Still an unknown quantity

DETROIT — The Republicans have had a joyous party in Detroit. In a spectacular eruption of glass skyscrapers and vast sports arenas in the center of this troubled automotive capital of the world, they concentrated day and night on having fun, and in between, on denouncing the failures of the Carter administration. But there is still a feeling here in the old Irish phrase: "Ronnie, we scarcely know ye."

The GOP leaders have been very tough and aggressively articulate. From former President Gerald Ford, former Secretary of the Treasury Simon, and former Secretary of State Kissinger, they have developed two themes: the Carter administration's record on domestic economic affairs has been a "disaster;" and its record on foreign affairs has been an "irretrievable catastrophe." This they all agree threatens the security of the Republic. Therefore, as Ford insisted, in an exceptionally personal conclusion: "Carter must go."

Foreign policy

In some ways, Kissinger's speech was more startling than anybody else's. Not so long ago, he was arguing publicly that the hope of the nation was in a compromise between the political parties, in a nonpartisan foreign policy that would persuade our allies and our adversaries that we were a united country. But in recent months he has come to the belief that President Carter's foreign policy is not only inconsistent but frivolous, and that, as he made clear in Detroit, the security of the free nations of the world depends on a change of government in Washington.

"A new administration is needed," he told this convention, "to restore steadiness and coherence to our foreign policy. The world is in turmoil because America ... has lost its compass course. If you do not know where you are going, every road will get you nowhere ..."

Kissinger had a talk with former President Ford in California a few days ago and with Governor Reagan here in Detroit Tuesday. Kissinger and Reagan are not each other's favorite characters, but in his speech to the convention, Kissinger defined a theme, written before he talked to Reagan, that is very much along the line Reagan has favored in the past.

The former secretary of state was uncharacteristically partisan. "The Carter administration," he said, "has managed the extraordinary feat of having at one and the same time the worst relations with our allies, the worst relations with our adversaries, and the most serious upheavals in the developing world since the end of the Second World War ...

"A philosophy of abdication has been allied to a diplomacy of incoherence," Kissinger said. "What are our allies to make of a policy that first proposes to demilitarize the Indian Ocean and now seeks bases in all its corners?

"That offered our allies a neutron bomb and then withdrew it? That promised in 1976 to cut our defense budget, canceled or delayed every strategic program it inherited, and now fiddles with figures to pretend an increase.

RONALD REAGAN
. . . who'll write his lines?

"That first called Iran an island of stability and then dithered while it slid into hostility ..." Kissinger went on and on with this series of contradictions. All this proves, however, is that the Republicans are united in their opposition to Carter and his administration. It does not prove that they are united in any Republican policies or remedies for the problems they feel Carter has failed to solve.

The theme of this convention, plastered all over the place, is "Together, A New Beginning," but these delegates, and even the leaders of this party, are not really together, except on getting rid of Jimmy Carter. You cannot talk to any of them without getting this feeling. There is an odd paradox in this gathering, a little like Detroit itself, which looks optimistic with its soaring new glass palaces along the river, but is surrounded by alarming economic problems and doubts about the future.

The delegates here, with their serious intentions and their silly hats, are not really "together" and don't give the impression of being on the verge of any "new beginning". When they talk seriously about Reagan, and are asked what "new beginning" they think he has in mind, they looked vaguely dazed, and don't seem to have the vaguest idea of where he is going or who's going with him.

This is not to say that they don't like him. He has been here as he usually is, very amiable. He has subjected himself to some hard interviews in the last few days, and has handled some curve-ball questions with common sense and good humor. This has even encouraged the cynical Washington press corps, which hasn't had a good laugh since Nixon announced, "I'm not a crook."

Also, Reagan has indicated — though this still remains to be proved — that he is listening to the advice of the talented and experienced members of his own party and will mobilize its best brains, if he is elected in November. Certainly he has been listening to leaders of all persuasions since he arrived here. So he has made a good impression. Under severe and even provocative questioning, he has been patient, calm, energetic, pragmatic, and unfailingly courteous.

Time advantage

In the coming days, he will have the advantage of time to organize for several weeks before the Democrats work out their own personal and political tangles. Even to organize and define his own thought and explain what kind of cabinet and philosophy would guide him if elected.

That is one of the most interesting aspects of this Republican convention. Even Reagan's closest advisers don't seem to know him very well and are not even willing to guess what he would do after he's nominated. Oddly, this is true of many of his most enthusiastic supporters. They agree that he's a master of reading his lines, but they don't know who will write them. The Republican moderates have been pushed aside in Detroit, but even the conservatives, who finally have their own man, don't know what he will do.

War of peace

Regarding the recent TV documentary, "The War Called Peace". The panel were all Americans, except for one Briton, an ex-ambassador, academics and commentators questioned by two leading journalists.

The talk was all about the need to catch up with Soviet armaments and expand NATO into a global alliance. Not one word was said about inflation despite it being the world's No. 1 problem.

The Soviets can increase their armaments while keeping the standard of living of their people down. This the capitalist nations cannot do so that increasing armaments will, by reason of their being a burden on the economy, cause increased inflation.

Lenin said sixty years ago that the way to destroy the capitalists was to cause increasing inflation. His prophecy is coming true. To defeat it will require statesmen of outstanding stature which are no where to be seen yet. — H.S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Vapid ceremony

Recently I attended the graduation ceremonies of one of our local high schools. It was the first graduation I had attended for over 30 years.

Graduation days at the private school I attended way back when were occasions for at least one speech. Sometimes the speeches were far too long and hackneyed, but I believe all the speakers were sincere and all impressed on the graduates that they should go out into the world and serve God and their fellow men.

The recent graduation was much grander than anything I had experienced in the past. The class of 1980 were a delight to look upon; expensively and tastefully attired, they exuded good looks and good health, and by all accounts their standard of scholarship was one of the highest in the province.

The principal declared the class of '80 was the finest class he had ever graduated. He wished them "success" in their future careers and lots of fun graduation parties. He introduced the superintendent as a man with whom he had had differences in the past, but still admired.

The superintendent was amiable, but I can't remember a word he said.

The representative from the school board advised the students to leave home and travel, explore all Canada, and know their native land — very sound advice as far as it went.

The minister of education advised the students not to be in too much of a hurry to leave home and to take their time on deciding on a career.

The mayor hoped some of the students would decide to stand for local council, for the experience was a rewarding one.

They all wished the students success in the future, though none defined what they meant by success. Admittedly no one got up and suggested the young people get busy with feathering their own nest. I should be grateful for small mercies.

Would it really have been out of place for one speaker to suggest that the class of 1980 could spend interesting and worthwhile lives helping to solve some of the serious problems that face the world today? Is it wrong to suggest that these privileged offspring had some obligations to society, or that a life of service and challenge can be exciting?

I do not believe any speaker was really devoid of ideals. I believe each one was capable of saying something more inspiring and they could have done so without being hypocritical, long-winded, hackneyed, platitudinous or boring. Maybe they felt any high-souled sentiment would be unappreciated by the 'Me generation'? Maybe they feel we shouldn't expect much from our overindulged young? And maybe they were wrong, for I am sure we have better young people than we deserve.

What I would like to know is — are all modern graduation ceremonies as vapid as this one was? If so should we press for something better? — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

Made even better

Last week my family and I were visiting your city. My 10-year-old daughter lost her change purse with $10 and small change at the Provincial Museum. There was no identification in the purse and she was very upset, realising that she would probably never see the money or purse again.

The loss was realised some hours later and imagine our delight when we phoned and found out that not only the purse was handed in but also every penny and the $10 bill. I would like to thank through your paper the person who handed in the money and purse. What a joy to find honesty! It really made the day for us.

Victoria has always been a good place for us to visit, and now it has become even better. — M. Schoeler, Golden, B.C.

How the Jocks for Jesus follow 'God's game plan'

"Hey, I know I'm being used for my name. As an athlete, you are used all the time. But you've got to put it in perspective. I don't mind being used as a vehicle by another athlete or young person to at least start thinking about religion. Now, I'm not going to force somebody to convert, you know. I just want to use it (my name) as a vehicle for someone to come and understand Jesus Christ."
— Roger Staubach

SKIP HOLLANDSWORTH
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — It is a Sunday morning, and the television evangelists are on almost every channel. They are bubbling with joy as they push the message. They reach for the unsaved. And they are using whatever help they can find.

On Robert Schuller's "Hour of Power," Chicago Bears quarterback Vince Evans is speaking: "God, you see, does all things for a reason. I got off to a really good start last season, then I was stricken with a staph infection, and it put me in the hospital for 27 days. And I began to question myself, and God, and wondered why this was happening to me.

"You get so caught up in the glamor of pro football that you forget everything and put yourself first. Well, God told me I have to have a break. He said, 'I've got to give you a rest, take you off the field, so you will know that I am first.' "

A quick change of the dial, and Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, the wide receiver for the Houston Oilers, discusses a knee injury that kept him out for a season. "If it's God's will to let me play," he says, "then I'll play. My career is in His hands now."

Another station, and it's Pat Kelly, the Baltimore outfielder testifying on a sit-down religious interview show: "The Lord's touch is in everything I do. He is with me, from the time I wake up until I go to bed. He is with me on the field, when I play, everywhere."

They have fought the good fight. They have run the good race. They are, as the Psalmist says, young lions roaring after their prey, and seeking their meat from God.

The Jock for Jesus. Is that really an odd combination?

The way most Americans are dedicated to their games, the real God seems to be one who sweats and scores touchdowns and makes shoestring catches in centre-field. Sports certainly have all the trappings of a religion itself — the sacred Sunday ritual of squatting by the television and rooting for the team of light over the team of darkness, the spectacle of uniforms and banners, the adoration of saint-like heroes, the desperate pleas for salvation and victory.

James Baker, a history professor at Western Kentucky University, says a Sunday game "is not unlike a Latin high Mass performed by professionals for the edification and instruction of those deemed by the Heavenly Commissioner unworthy to participate personally."

But while the national passion continues to manifest itself in sports, with the afternoon contest replacing the church service, with the Holy God coming in second to the Jock God, many of the people who play the sports have gone after some other spiritual satisfaction.

"There are probably more really committed Christians in sports, both college and professional, than in any other occupation in America," Billy Graham once said — a suspect statement, of course, but one that does indicate the very significant growth of the Christian movement in sports.

"The first time I ever spoke to a professional team," says Billy Zeoli, unquestionably the most prominent evangelist to professional athletes, "was to the Cleveland Browns in 1960. Three people showed up. (Defensive lineman) Bill Glass made me talk in front of the bathroom so that as the players came out, they walked right in on me praying and couldn't leave. They had to sit through everything. Then, in about 1965, two teams in baseball had Sunday chapel services, the Twins and the Cubs. And even that had trouble getting started."

Now, on every Sunday during the season, all the major league baseball and football teams hold chapel services. There are Sunday services on the PGA golf tour and the stock car racing circuit. There are numerous groups which not only minister to the athletes, but use sports stars as travelling celebrity evangelists to attract the unbeliever — Athletes in Action (AIA), Baseball Chapel, Inc., the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA), Sports Ambassadors, Pro Athletes Outreach.

The symbolic pregame rites and then the rituals followed on the field reflect, at least, some reverent need on the ballplayer's part. By participating in the final team meal (Communion?) or shutting his eyes and breathing rhythmically to enhance his concentraton (prayer?) or shouting out inspirational slogans to pump himself up (affirmation of faith?), the athlete practically goes through the same things as a churchgoer does.

"The life of an athlete and the life of a believer," says FCA national president John Erickson, "probably parallel each other more than any other combination found in society. There is sacrifice. Toughness. Compassion. Hard training. Discipline. The athlete understands that kind of commitment."

At the University of Notre Dame, where towering above the football stadium on the library wall is a portrait of Christ with his arms uplifted (he's nicknamed Touchdown Jesus), Father James Riehle, the official athletic chaplain, delivers a Mass for the players before every football game. "I've never understood it," he says, "but after some Masses I've had kids come up and say to me, 'Boy, you make football a real spiritual experience.' I think they are understanding that football can teach you different aspects of life, about pain and defeat and winning with grace."

Dallas Cowboy coach Tom Landry is one of the most well-known Christians in sports. When he speaks about his faith, his voice suddenly becomes alive and is filled with a vibrancy that is rarely heard when he discusses football. Moreover, he is extremely dedicated to the religious movement among athletes, working closely with the FCA and at chapels with his own players.

He also knows the pitfalls — the easy charges of hypocrisy made against athletes who can be so deadly violent during a game and yet so pious afterwards, the belief among much of the public that a team gathering for prayer is actually pleading with God for a victory, the fact that the use of prayer before the game or the presence of a priest on the sideline creates the image that a halfowed, sacred contest is being played.

Moreover, sports religion sometimes takes on a theology — at least a religious lingo — all its own. When Billy Zeoli talks before players, he outlines what he calls "God's Game Plan." Others will offer prayers of supplication that the Lord will help them "in the third and longs of life." Players give testimonies such as, "I play the game of life and Jesus Christ is my coach and he'll block the Devil for me as I run to the touchdown of life."

In the FCA's magazine, The Christian Athlete, a story appeared in which the writer (a minister) wrote that the defensive line in the Christian's life is made of Fear, Sin, Satan, Despair, Worry and Separation. The linebackers are Sorrow, Tribulation and Unbelief. The defensive backs are Darkness and Death.

After former Dallas Cowboy John Niland ran down his neighborhood street in the middle of the night, shouting nonsense and banging on the doors of houses and finally being held down by six policemen, he explained it as a conversion experience. There was a major league pitcher who, after throwing a home run pitch, later explained to his manager, "Don't blame me. It was God's will." Arkansas basketball player U.S. Reed, after he sank the winning field goal that beat rival University of Texas by one point, said he'd never have made the shot "if Jesus Christ wasn't on my side."

"It's sort of hard," says another FCA stalwart, Roger Staubach, "to go to a high school banquet and listen to a kid say his team won the district championship because the team found Christ."

"No question about it," says Ron Morris, a former SMU basketball star who is a vice president of the FCA. "There is constantly a danger with religion in sports. You can get a coach who's not a mature person who can milk this thing for all it's worth."

Former Cleveland Browns tackle Bill Glass is now a popular, full-time evangelist, and one who remembers how athletes can distort the concept of Christianity. "There are a lot of athletes," he says, "who are asked to speak beyond their experiences and that causes some trouble. Here is a guy who has a very sincere commitment, but he is a spiritual baby. And yet someone puts him up there to speak simply because he's a famous name. I think we should remember that the Lord says take up your bed and walk, not take up your bed and talk."

Morris calls the Christ-is-my-teammate jargon "hokey." But he says, "I think the athletes, after a certain period, are getting more and more sophisticated now, and they want more than a testimony."

Certainly, the Christian athletes get their share of stinging criticism — even from their own teammates. Joe Don Looney used to kick long punts, then look up in the air and yell, "How did you like that one, God?" Some suspicious players still gather by the door of the locker room chapel service on Sundays and yell, "You better bow your head, man. You need a hit tonight."

When the Orioles' Pat Kelly asked manager Earl Weaver if he could use his office to hold chapel, Weaver said yes. "Don't you want to join us?" Kelly asked. "Hell, no," Weaver promptly responded.

"But Earl, don't you want to walk with the Lord?"

Weaver smiled. "I'd rather have you walk with the bases loaded."

Coach Landry with quarterback Staubach . . . a real spiritual experience?

'Understanding' the abominable

An Editorial

In the Iranian town of Kerman the other day, two women and two men were buried chest-deep in the earth so that people could bombard them with rocks. They were dead in 15 minutes.

The authorities explained that stoning for sex offences was sanctified by the Koran. Iran's chief executioner, Ayatollah Khalkhali, shrugged his assent: "We approve of anything the Koran says. What is the difference between killing people with stones and with bullets? But throwing stones certainly teaches people a lesson."

The story was a one-day wonder, and the world moved on. But it is hard to forget because Iran is only one of many governments that tolerate, even encourage, the brutal termination of "undesirables." And no matter how ghastly the procedure, there is always someone smoothly arguing that official inhumanity must be seen "in perspective" and "understood."

In the case of Iran, some argue, Americans ought to recall their partnership with the Shah and therefore complicity in the torture carried out by his secret police. It is also said that Americans should "understand" Islam and not use their own values to judge other cultures. After all, death by stoning is also a common practice in Saudi Arabia, and is it worth upsetting the Saudis by making a fuss?

At least on "practical" grounds, Americans are further asked to be understanding of anti-terrorist excesses by governments with which the United States collaborates in one degree or another — the Philippines, Argentina, South Korea, Indonesia. Sad to say, this indulgence is now being claimed for Turkey.

As a terrorist challenge has mounted, Ankara has relaxed restraints on police torture and, more ominously, by free-wheeling vigilante gangs. Not long ago, a young dissident schoolteacher missing from his village was found with his eyes and tongue gouged out and his head soaked in acid to assure an agonizing death.

We decline to "understand." It has taken centuries to distill a code of human rights that transcends differences in creed or ideology and its norms have been defined in United Nations treaties.

These are, admittedly, routinely flouted, but to argue that lack of compliance invalidates the norms is to argue that an unpunished murder invalidates the laws against homicide.

This unhappy epoch teaches no more vivid lesson than the danger of excusing the indefensible. To the medieval mind of an Ayatollah Khalkhali, death by stoning is justified because it is mentioned in the Koran. But for centuries, Islam also sanctioned slavery, and it was one of the scandals of imperialism that the slave-trade was abetted or winked at by Europeans.

Cultural relativism has its limits, and at some point tolerance becomes complicity. The stoning at Kerman, like any act of official sadism, can properly be understood only in this sense — as an obscenity that coarsens the common name of humanity.

What a crazy statement

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — One of the things poor kids in New York like to do is walk around carrying a big machine they call a "box." The box plays music through a radio and sometimes, in the fancier models, through cassette machinery.

It almost always plays this music very loudly. Sometimes you can hear the box coming a block or two away. It drives a lot of people crazy. These people say that the box makes noise, not music.

How you feel about this depends on your definition of music. If your idea of music is being hounded through the streets by the amplifiers from a rock concert in Madison Square Garden, if your idea of music is a subway collision followed by the screams of the injured, the box-stuff is music.

There is some question whether kids who tote this machinery think they are bringing music to the masses or doing something more sinister, like giving the world an ice pick in the eardrum. Having been a kid once myself, I can see how a boy with a box could find it hard to resist full volume after he realized it drove a lot of people crazy.

There is also the theory that the kid with a box is making a statement. Is there anybody who isn't making a statement these days? A man throws away his flannel suit and starts wearing denim, he's making a statement. Somebody throws a flower pot off the Empire State Building and bashes in a car roof on Fifth Avenue, he's making a statement. A kid gets a box and walks the streets driving a lot of people crazy — sure, he's making a statement.

But what does this statement say? The answer to that question is another question: Who cares? Not the kid, that's for sure. If you fight your way through the wall of oncoming music and get inside, right there in the centre where the music originates, and you look the kid right in the eye and scream, "Kid, I know you're making a statement, but I don't know what it is, so could you articulate it more precisely?" — if you do that, what happens?

The kid looks at you as if you're a lunatic. "You crazy, man?" he asks. And with good reason. Here is the kid, having a perfectly good time listening to his music, showing everybody he owns this beautiful, complicated, enviable hunk of electronic hardware, making girls' mouths water with desire to caress that fabulous machinery and driving a lot of people crazy at the same time.

And here is this character — some nut? — asking him this asinine grown-up question about what he is trying to state. It has probably never occurred to the kid that he is trying to state anything, any more than it ever occurred to him as a baby that he was making a statement when he dumped the creamed spinach on the floor.

When he dumped the spinach, he was making a mess first and if there was a statement added, let somebody else decode it. When he goes strolling with his box at maximum blare he is grooving in musical ruts that satisfy something inexplicable in his central nervous system. To put it simply, he is enjoying himself.

The man who understood this more clearly than all these psychologists in New York was the fellow who first sold the Japanese portable-radio manufacturers on the idea of producing these machines. I don't know who he was. Probably somebody named Takata.

I see him one day walking into the Tokyo office of Panasonic or Sony lugging what looks like a 50-pound suitcase covered with knobs and revolving wheels. The electronic moguls, Sato and Hideki, are appalled when Takata explains his idea.

"A machine to tickle poor kids of New York," Takata explains.

"Are you off your rocker?" asks Sato. "What's a kid going to do with a 50-pound suitcase?"

Takata explains that kids will carry it through the streets making much noise and showing all the world their great stamina and muscularity.

"Economically unfeasible," says Hideki. "Poor kids cannot come up with the 300 bucks it would cost to market that suitcase."

"They will come up with the scratch somehow," says Takata, "once they realize that with this machine they can make a statement."

"Make a statement!" Sato exclaims. "You mean drive a lot of people crazy."

"That, too." says Takata.

"But," says Hideki, "what, please, is the statement all these poor kids will make with the help of this suitcase?"

"Who knows?" says Takata. "They'll find something to state. Kids always do, though they are too young to realize what they are stating. Listen," he says, turning the suitcase to full volume.

"Yowie!" scream Sato and Hideki.

"Great for driving people crazy, eh?" Takata says. "New York will hate it."

"We start production at once," says Hideki. "Right," says Sato, "but if any of those suitcases find their way back to Japan, Takata, I'll reassign you to the New York office so fast you'll feel like a satellite transmission."

Bush on GOP ticket

His guests asked what quality he most sought in a vice-president. Reagan said he wanted someone who could serve as president.

They pounced on that. Why not someone who had proven his ability to fill the presidency: Ford?

Word leaked out to the news-hungry delegates Wednesday that the courtship was under way.

Out of the view of reporters and cameras, Ford now met with Reagan aides. It was essential, they told him, that Jimmy Carter be driven from the White House. He agreed. They recognized, they said, the tremendous sacrifice he would have to make but that he could create a ticket that could guarantee victory in November.

He wouldn't say yes. He didn't say no.

Ford made his first trip of the day to see Reagan.

The session broke up with no decision and Ford went public with his agony.

He and his wife sat with Walter Cronkite in the CBS anchor booth as the fourth session of the convention got under way.

"Neither Betty nor myself would have any sense that our pride would be hurt if we went there as No. 2 instead of No. 1," said Ford, who had been both.

He brushed off the question whether he at 67 was too old to be the stand-in for Reagan, who would be 70 soon after becoming president.

After the interview, Ford went back to the 70th floor to watch the convention

The negotiators continued meeting.

They would talk for a while, then run back to their principals to report.

After it was all over, NBC said that Ford laid down three conditions that Reagan could not accept — that Kissinger be given a major foreign policy role in a Reagan administration and that Ford be given a voice in the National Security Council and the Domestic Policy Council.

Erroneous word flashed across the convention floor that a deal had been struck and that soon the delegates would see standing before them a dream ticket.

Even Bush said later that he believed the reports.

At 11:15, Ford took that elevator ride again. Alone. He and Reagan talked for 10 minutes. Alone.

"He just came in and announced that he told Reagan he wouldn't do it," said Ford spokesman Larry Speakes.

"He said he felt he made the right decision," said Ford's White House photographer, David Hume Kennerly. "He just looked relieved."

San Francisco hotel workers out on strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Unions representing about 6,000 chambermaids, bellhops, clerks and restaurant workers at 36 major San Francisco hotels went on strike early today after contract talks broke down.

The work stoppage was announced after marathon talks ended shortly before the 6 a.m. strike deadline.

The 402-room Stanford Court Hotel said it will close because of the strike and at the downtown Hilton, assistant manager David Venett said guests will be asked to leave.

The 700-room Fairmont Hotel is operating on a skeleton staff.

FAA order affects 1,650 aircraft

reliable powerplants ever produced for aviation.

A Pratt & Whitney spokesman said the FAA action made mandatory a service bulletin the manufacturer is sending to airlines.

The investigation that led to the order began June 15, when an engine disintegrated as a Hawaiian Airlines DC-9 was taking off from Honolulu. The pilot aborted the takeoff and the passengers were evacuated. There were minor injuries in the evacuation process. The engine fragments exploded outward, officials said, and did not penetrate the passenger cabin.

The Hawaiian Airlines engine was an older model that had undergone thousands of takeoffs and landings. Forty-five engines of that model were ordered inspected as a result of that incident.

At the same time FAA officials began checking other JT8D models on a random basis. Two different engine models on Eastern Airlines planes were discovered to have a similar problem. That led to Wednesday's sweeping order.

The problem part is known as the eighth-stage compressor hub, a 59-pound wheel deep in the engine to which a cluster of compressor blades is attached. Cracking in the hub was found to be the reason for the disintegration.

"We have determined," an FAA spokesman said, "that a machining error during manufacture is responsible for the hub cracking."

Technicians explained that a flange is molded onto the hub specifically so it can be machined to bring the hub into perfect round, or balance. In the grinding process, according to the technicians, forces were exerted that tended to contribute to possible cracking of the hub at some point in the engine's life.

The compressor in a JT8D engine collects air and forces it through 13 successively smaller fans into a combustion chamber, where it is mixed with fuel and ignited. The resulting gases are then exhausted to provide thrust. The eighth stage would be the eighth of the 13 fans.

There are 13 different models of JT8D engines currently in service, ranging from being brand new to several years old. The engines are supposed to be retired after 20,000 cycles.

Policemen stalling, Anshelm charges

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen are deliberately stalling in their contract talks with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, association manager Carl Anshelm charged today.

He made the statement following a brief, unsuccessful effort by mediator Bob Almgren to get talks going Wednesday.

Anshelm said actual face-to-face discussions lasted about 15 minutes and the police negotiators introduced a new issue into the dispute.

He said the policemen say they will not deal with any contract issues until there has been a settlement of the controversy over whether Esquimalt should have its own fire protection force or contract the service through the city of Victoria.

The municipality has a dual police and firefighting force.

"It was a complete act of futility," Anshelm said of Wednesday's discussions.

He said it is clear the policemen feel if they stall long enough their limited strike action will put sufficient pressure on the three forces involved that they will capitulate to the employees' demands.

No further talks are scheduled.

Volunteers sought for mock juries

Up to 300 university volunteers are sought as members of mock jury panels in a sociological study of the dynamics of decision-making.

The summer project by Dr. Paul Baker at University of Victoria is being funded by a $10,000 grant to attempt to show what happens when a jury is locked up to deliberate.

Baker is asking for volunteers to make up 40 to 50 juries who will judge a ficticious civil case brought by a professor forced to quit work by a mandatory retirement provision at 65.

Funds are provided by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council to further research on the subject of small group decision-making.

Jury decision-making has been under study for several years in Canada and the U.S. It involves leadership, influence, conformity and communication patterns between jurors and may provide data on whether six jurors can be as effective as the traditional 12.

Volunteers, who will be eligible for a $50 prize, may be any student, university employee or member of the public willing to give an hour of their time to the project. Baker may be contacted at Cornett 383, 477-6911 local 4797, or 477-4223.

All-Sooke Saturday

Hand-bucking, log birling and tree-climbing will be the star attractions at All-Sooke Day on Saturday.

The weatherman promises clear skies when loggers from all over North America pit their skills against world champions like Ron Hartill of Sooke.

The day starts at 7 a.m. with a pancake breakfast in the Sooke Community Association's park at Sooke River flats.

A parade to the grounds will take place at 10 a.m. from downtown Sooke.

Logging sports eliminations start at 9 a.m. and the finals in each event will be in the afternoon.

The traditional barbecued salmon and beef will be served starting at noon and small rides will be set up on the midway for children.

The baby contest, for the Victoria Times Cup, will be held in the afternoon.

The day will end with a dance at Sooke Community Hall.

There's plenty of parking, but the association is expecting record crowds and advising people to arrive early.

Parking lot attendants will be directing traffic and five shuttle buses will take visitors from the parking areas to the flats.

A bus service between Colwood and Sooke will not operate this year.

Build a Maggie, province urged

Victoria needs a ship better than the Princess Marguerite to bring tourists from Seattle, Visitors Information Centre president Les Wood said today.

"It should be fast, capable of carrying cars, and with a passenger capacity of about 2,000.

"If we can't find a ship like this, why doesn't the provincial government build one? We have a shipyard in Victoria."

Wood said the Victoria Princess ferry was not at all suitable and the Marguerite is not perfect.

"There are definite requirements for the run and, if we can't find a ship that meets these requirements, we should be prepared to build it. This is a vital service."

Meanwhile, said Wood, the government should make an early announcement about its replacement ship for next season.

One of the reasons for lower traffic this year was a government delay in announcing its 1980 plans.

"They waited until 60 days before the season opened to announce they would use the Victoria Princess. The tour operators had to make their plans long before that and all sorts of packages were cancelled."

The cost to Victoria this summer is 300 tourists a day, 9,000 a month, lost because of the delay in announcing the '80 schedule.

On Wednesday the B.C. Steamship Co. said it will deal with the question of a 1981 replacement for the Victoria Princess in 30 days, about mid-August.

Wood said whatever vessel is used next summer should be scheduled to arrive in Victoria just before noon and should leave about 6 p.m.

"We need at least six hours to make it worthwhile."

In 1979 the Marguerite arrived at noon and left at 4:30 p.m.

He said a schedule change proposed by Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber, to have the replacement ship leave Victoria in the morning and come back in the afternoon, requiring Seattle visitors to stay overnight, is unworkable.

"Those who want to stay overnight will do so anyway. All that would do is cut out the daytrippers."

Tourists flood back with sun

Victoria's lagging tourist season has taken a spurt, plugging commercial hostelries and forcing the Visitor Information Centre to send people to 30 private homes in the last two nights.

"The weather has got a lot to do with it," said Ald. Ron McKenzie, a VIC director.

But the overflow situation also coincides with the annual convention of Jehovah's Witnesses which brought some 5,000 extra visitors to the city this week. Many are billeted by the church but the sudden influx does have an effect on hotel accommodation.

VIC information officer Lorraine Cooper said a similar situation occurred during the Witness meeting last July.

The centre has about 250 private homes with 400 beds listed for overflow accommodation when commercial hotels and motels are filled to capacity.

Cooper said when rooms in the immediate area are all taken, visitors checking in at VIC are offered alternative commercial accommodation up-island as far as Shawnigan, Duncan and Lake Cowichan.

Those who don't choose to drive any further after 10 p.m. may take their choice of private homes with accommodation varying from a single bed up to complete houses or condominiums.

Tuesday night visitors were sent as far as Cowichan and about 70 persons were accommodated in 16 private homes. On Wednesday about 100 persons were taken by 10-15 householders, Cooper said.

McKenzie said lower mainlanders and visitors from Washington and Alberta are here in great numbers. He said newspaper advertisements taken by northwestern U.S. communities putting Mount St. Helen's volcano eruption in perspective had helped the travel industry.

"They are definitely making people feel more at ease about coming into the Pacific northwestern region generally," he said.

Cooper said visitors are asked to fill out a short questionnaire about their Victoria accommodations, partly as a check on gouging, and so far the centre has had no complaints.

Giddy-up ... then the crash

By JED STUART

You've heard the one about the female driver who told the judge the telephone pole jumped off the sidewalk and hit her car?

It was a horse of a similar color, as it were, shortly after 5:10 p.m. Wednesday when a young woman driving a Tally-ho wagon loaded with tourists collided with a pole on the north side of Superior behind the legislature.

The point of impact was the front right corner of the wagon canopy, bending all the pipes supporting the canopy about as far as they could have been bent before breaking off.

No one was hurt, but the blonde tour guide's pride was severely bruised — not least when she discovered the extent of the damages and wondered over the microphone how she would explain the accident to her boss.

Indeed, she could hardly hold back the tears a few minutes later when, on reaching Beacon Hill Park, she discovered one of the two percherons pulling the wagon had lost part of its harness and could not proceed.

Fortunately, the damsel was not in distress for too long.

While she kept the horses calm, one of the male passengers climbed into the driver's seat and held the reins. Another passenger hitched a ride on a following Tally-ho to the nearest pay phone and called the Royal London Wax Museum receptionist, who relayed the SOS to the Tally-ho tour stand across from the museum on Menzies.

After two trips to the park in a horseless carriage, the supervisor managed to get the harness repaired and the tour was able to giddy-up once again.

Although the passengers were offered rides back to the tour stand and full cash refunds, everyone decided to stay on.

After all, it was a beautiful summer's evening, and — in addition to a tour lasting about twice as long as the regular one hour and five minutes — the passengers got for their money the excitement of a minor collision and a taste of the frustrations of the horse-and-buggy era.

Judge praises hospice for change in youth

By MIKE HUGHES

A privately-run residential treatment program on the Malahat for problem youths was praised Wednesday in Victoria family court.

Judge Lawrence Brahan told George Bullied he is very impressed with the results of the Life Centred Learning Hospice.

Bullied opened the hospice last December on 23 acres off Mile 17 Road below the Malahat highway.

The program was mentioned in connection with the case of a 16-year-old boy on probation for wilful damage and causing a disturbance.

The boy was brought back before Brahan in May on two charges of breach of that probation order. Brahan was told then the professionals' efforts to treat the boy while keeping him in the community seemed to be collapsing.

The boy had been described in court as highly volatile, totally unable to control himself once he loses his temper.

The court was also told in May the only alternative was a residential treatment centre for the boy but that none was available in the province. Brahan gave the professionals six weeks to come up with another program.

On Wednesday, the court was told the boy had been placed in the Bullied program and was "progressing extremely well."

Hugh Hayward, who specializes in adolescent counselling, said since being on the program the boy's whole attitude has changed.

"I just see a really pleasant change for the better," he said.

Brahan said he is pleased the boy is doing so well and wished him the best of luck.

"Hopefully we shan't see you here again," he added.

The judge expressed some concern as to whether government funding for the boy's program could be relied on.

Hayward said the corrections branch appears quite reluctant to provide money for youths to attend the Bullied program.

However, a probation office spokesman gave his assurance the funds will be provided in this case.

He said corrections branch policy toward the Bullied program is that money will be given for individual contracts but no over-all sum of money provided so that the hospice could be used on a remand basis.

Bullied said the 16-year-old is showing some leadership qualities, explaining that he is helping other young people at the hospice with their problems.

The plan is to give the boy some technical training and probably within two of three months he will be back in the community again, he said.

Bullied said in a later interview the corrections branch is now supportive of his program but the human resources ministry is still showing some reluctance.

"We're still fighting the idea that a private concern can provide a fantastic service," he said.

Bullied said the residential part of the program is filled to capacity with 12 young people and there is a waiting list of others. There are five on the day program, the one used by the 16-year-old boy, and there are facilities for 10 more.

For fitness nuts only: Canada's first triathlon

Dale Erven wants to be an Iron Man.

One day he figures he'll be ready for it. But right now he's concentrating on organizing the inaugural Sri Chinmoy Triathlon.

Sri Chinmoy is a meditation centre that believes in promoting physical as well as mental fitness. And a triathlon, as you might have guessed, is a combination of three events. Or three sports, if you like.

When you've heard what is involved, you probably won't like it unless you're a fitness nut, that is, and have already been training pretty frantically.

Canada's first triathlon is being staged right here on the Saanich Peninsula on Sunday, Aug.3, and already organizer Erven says he has five definite entrants — including one woman — and has had many inquiries and requests for forms to be sent as far as Washington, Oregon, California and Tennessee.

The theory behind the triathlon is that an athlete begins by swimming a mile across Elk Lake, leaps from the water and onto a bike on which he then cycles 20 miles over "a slightly rolling course" through Central Saanich, and finally discards his machine and runs the last six miles to the finish line. Where, it is promised, he (or she) will receive a trophy if he (or she) wins and if not, a T-shirt and "a light, post-race meal."

The race is wide open. There are no favorites. Erven and his Sri Chinmoy Running Club friends, who have had some experience in this kind of event in the United States, will not be competing here because they'll be too busy organizing things and making sure everyone stays on the track, as it were.

Of the five entries in so far, two are from Victoria, one is from Nanaimo, one from Vancouver and one from Oregon.

A 23-year-old man from Victoria explained on his entry form that his present training for the event includes swimming a mile and-a-half on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, running eight miles at noon and cycling a total of 25 miles, to and from work on each of those days. Then, on the Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, he swims two and-a-half miles in the morning, runs five miles at mid-day and cycles 12 miles at night.

So you have to be pretty serious about it!

The other Victoria entrant is a 19-year-old woman who will be bidding for the trophy that goes to the first female competitor to finish.

(Prospective entrants should phone Dale at 592-6942 or the Sri Chinmoy Centre 592-6211).

"This is definitely the first triathlon in Canada and I know of only two others in the Western Hemisphere," says Erven, who was born and brought up in Victoria and went to Oak Bay Junior High before going on to high school in Alberta.

The other two are the Sri Chinmoy Triathlon in Connecticut, in which Erven competed last July, and the Iron Man Triathalon held each year in Hawaii.

As far as triathlons go, the Connecticut one is your average race but there's a clue to the endurance required lurking in the name of the Hawaii event.

You see, in the Iron Man contest you swim and cycle, just like the one here — only the run at the end is a marathon!

Dale Erven, who says he's employed in revovations, plans to compete in the Connecticut triathlon on Aug. 10 and he's training for the Iron Man contest next March in Hawaii.

For the first Victoria event the Sri Chinmoy people aren't expecting more than around 20 to 30 entrants but figure it will grow in popularity if it's held each year.

In Connecticut's first triathlon two years ago, they advertised a lot and had 80 entrants," Erven explains. "This year they haven't promoted it at all and already there are more than 200 entries in for the August race.

Gill, Powless lead Warriors into final

COQUITLAM (CP) — Jeff Gill scored three goals and clubmate Gary Powless was sharp in goal as North American Native Warriors upset Canada East 13-9 in the Nations Cup lacrosse action Wednesday night.

Warriors, who led 5-3 after the first period and 7-5 after 40 minutes, meet Canada West, represented by Coquitlam Adanacs, in the gold medal game tonight. Adanacs earned a berth in the final by virtue of their 4-0 record in round-robin preliminary play. The Warriors were 2-2.

Dave White and Chuck Martin had a pair of goals apiece for the Warriors. Daryl, Harry and Barry Powless added single goals. Vern Baker, Frank Davis and Delmar Jacobs completed the scoring.

Ken Colley scored three goals for Brooklin, Ont. Redmen, representing Canada East, which fired 54 shots at Gary Powless. Bill Down scored twice for the Redmen.

Caps outshoot Aztecs

Times News Services

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shootout goals by Trevor Whymark, Gerry Gray and newcomer Alan Taylor gave Vancouver Whitecaps a 2-1 decision over Los Angeles Aztecs in a North American Soccer League game Wednesday night before a near sell-out crowd of 30,809.

Los Angeles led 1-0 after the first half on a goal by brilliant Luis Fernando. It was the Brazilian's 20th of the season and the sixth straight game in which he has scored.

The Whitecaps tied the game with less than 21 minutes to play in regulation time when Ray Hankin drilled home a short shot after a corner kick by Gray deflected to the big striker off a Los Angeles defender in the penalty area.

The teams battled through 15 scoreless minutes of overtime before the shootout which put goalkeepers Bruce Grobbelaar of the Whitecaps and Los Angeles' Alfredo Anhielo squarely on the spot.

Grobbelaar allowed only one of four Los Angeles shooters to score, Gary Etherington, while Anhielo stopped only one of four Vancouver shots.

The win moved the Whitecaps, 12-11, to within 18 points of the second-place Aztecs, 14-8, in the Western Division of the National Conference.

The large crowd was attracted by the return of popular forward Kevin Hector. He agreed Tuesday to play for the balance of the season after a nine-month contract dispute with the Vancouver management.

Hector played for 57 minutes before giving way to Taylor, the quick forward from Norwich of the English First Division who signed last week with the Whitecaps.

Fernando scored in the 23rd minute when he escaped the man-marking of Vancouver's John Craven and sped through the middle with a quick burst to beat Grobbelaar with a short shot.

Sweeper Rudi Krol ignited the Vancouver comeback in the second half with his pin-point passing as he moved up from the back line to direct the Whitecap attack.

Coach Tony Waiters said he was pleased with the comeback because it was the first time this season the defending Soccer Bowl champions had come from behind to win.

Elsewhere in the NASL, New England Tea Men stretched their winning streak to eight games by edging Rochester Lancers 1-0 while Seattle Sounders' eight-game string of successes ended with a 3-2 defeat by Washington Diplomats. And in other games, Philadelphia Fury upset New York Cosmos 2-1, Minnesota Kicks blanked Houston Hurricanes 1-0, Portland Timbers defeated Dallas Tornado 3-2, Chicago Sting stung Edmonton Drillers 2-1, San Diego Sockers socked Atlanta Chiefs 4-0, and Tampa Bay Rowdies shut out San Jose Earthquakes 3-0.

Guenter wins mound duel

TACOMA, Wash. — Victoria's Rob Guenter won his second game of the world fastball championship here Wednesday as he outdueled Kevin Herlihy of New Zealand in Canada's 1-0 victory.

Guenter allowed only two hits and struck out 10.

Terry Chayka hit his second single of the game in the ninth inning to drive in the winning run before 7,100 fans.

Chayka, 24, of Vineland, Ont., came to bat with two out and two men on base.

He flied to left field and outfielder Bob Jones fell on the play, allowing Greg Dick to score

Guenter's first win was a 3-1, one-hit decision over Argentina.

Third baseman John Green, the other Victorian on the squad, contributed a sacrifice during the ninth inning.

Canada now is the lone unbeaten team in Group B with a 5-0 record, while New Zealand dropped to 4-1. Canada plays Panama today in the final game of the round-robin portion of the tournament. The championship round beginsFriday.

Mexico is tied with New Zealand at 4-1, while Taiwan and Panama are 2-3.

TWO – HITTER STUMPS BLUES

Brian Puckett shackled Victoria on Wednesday night, holding the Blues to two hits while notching his first victory of the season as Medford A's came up with a 5-0 shutout in a Northwest League baseball game before 225 fans at Royal Athletic Park..

Joe Lorenz, with a single in the fourth inning, and Don Hyman, with another single in the fifth, were the only Blues to get to the tall righthander.

Joe Saprano sparked the Medford attack with three runs-batted-in on two doubles and a third-inning home run, his first in professional baseball.

Victoria starter Dave Weis, 3-2, took the loss.

Victoria slips to 13-13 while Medford improves to 10-19 with their second successive win over the Blues. (Line score on page 12)

Argos, Esks connect

By Canadian Press

Willie Wood figures sometime within the next month his Toronto Argonauts should start showing their spots.

The Argos riding a crest at the moment after their 20-17 win Wednesday night over Winnipeg Blue Bombers left them sitting atop the Eastern Football Conference standings with a 2-0 record.

Toronto hasn't won a championship since 1952 and hasn't even posed a threat since 1971 when it went to the Canadian Football League final before fumbling away its last opportunity.

"Sometime down the line, maybe in next month or so, maybe some character will start showing on this team," Wood said after his club almost blew the game in front of 20,980 Winnipeg fans.

"There's no way I would have figured our team would have been 2-0 at this point because, honestly, I don't think we are that good," Wood said. "I know we have some fine talent, but I think we are a little inexperience."

In the only other scheduled game Wednesday night, the Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos had little trouble subduing Saskatchewan Roughriders 21-6 in Regina.

Wide receiver Bob Gaddis caught a 23-yard pass from quarterback Mark Jackson early in the fourth quarter to put the Argos in front for the first time in their game, but it took a 40-yard field goal by Zenon Andrusyshy at the 7:37 mark to secure the victory.

Fullback Bill Harrison scored the first Toronto touchdown — his first in the CFL — on the final play of the first half to lift Toronto to a 7-7 tie. Andrusyshy converted both TDs and contributed the first of his two field goals — from 38 yards — in the third quarter.

Rick House scored the only Winnipeg TD. Trevor Kennerd kicked two field goals and three singles while Robert Woods notched a two-point conversion.

Marathoners by the hundreds inquire about Royal Victoria event

By MAX LOW

More than 1,000 runners are expected to take part in the first annual Royal Victoria Marathon on Saturday, Sept.20, and they could be coming from as far away as Eastern Canada, Hawaii and even Japan.

With exactly two months to go, marathon officials and the event's sponsors — the Victoria Times, Radio CJVI90, the Osaga running shoe company, Molson's Brewery and The Bay — are getting excited about the prospects.

"We're looking for a total of around 1,000 runners in the just over 26 mile race, maybe even more," says Royal Victoria Marathon Committee chairman Peter Wheaton. "We've already received hundreds of requests for entry forms from all over the United States, including Hawaii, Canada and Tokyo."

Those out-of-towners who have inquired will receive forms in the mail and locally they will be published in the Times, and will also be on hand soon at all community recreation centres, the YM-YWCA and The Bay. The sports department in the basement of The Bay will serve as a drop-off centre for the entry forms once they've been filled out.

The cost of registering for the Royal Victoria Marathon will be $6.

Interest in what officials hope will become a popular annual event isn't limited to runners from far away. The Marathon training clinic that began with the Y's fitness run on New Year's Day is still going strong and, though a few have dropped out along the way, there are still a group of 200 or more hardcore enthusiasts.

"And we know they're training hard for this race in centres up-Island as well as all over B.C.," explains Wheaton. "We're expecting around 400 to 500 runners from Vancouver Island alone."

Runners taking part in the Royal Victoria Marathon clinic are involved in training runs each Sunday morning leaving the Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park at 8:30 (not 9:30 a.m. as in the earlier clinics).

By the time Sept.20 rolls around there undoubtedly will be several big-name runners from the marathon world with their entry forms in. One will be Victoria's own Mike Creery, recently named as a marathoner to Canada's Olympic team.

But the emphasis of the whole thing is on participation by the masses and a striving to attain physical fitness.

Ray cards second ace

When Ray Plopper scored a hole-in-one Tuesday during play at the Pacific Northwest Golf Association men's championship, the gallery must have wondered what he could possibly do for an encore.

Plopper came up with a suitable reply Wednesday — his second hole-in-one in as many days.

In the women's championship at Uplands, medalist Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale charged from behind to eliminate Cindy Kelliher of Cheyenne, Wyo., 2 and 1 in the highlight match of the day.

Playing in the championship, Plopper, a 21-year-old member of Spokane Golf and Country Club, aced the 151-yard fourth hole at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club and went on to post a 3-and-2 victory over Scott Krieger of Portland, Ore.

Only a day earlier, Plopper aced the tough 241-yard 11th hole at Colwood.

In other championship flight play: medalist Jeff Ellis of Whidby Island, Wash., edged Ian Harper of Nanaimo 2 and 1; Jim Morris of Portland, Ore., took Ken Floyd of Royal Colwood on the 20th; Brian Mogg of Seattle, beat Dave Rands of Uplands on the 21st hole; Tom Rippon of Vancouver downed Dick Austin of Royal Colwood 3 and 2; Rob Lee of Everett, Wash., beat Eric Reid of Portland 3 and 2; Dave Emery of Vancouver defeated Greg Brown of Portland 5 and 3; Dave Mick of Royal Colwood thumped Tom Kane of Rainier, Wash., 7 and 6; and Brian Haugan of Tacoma tripped Jeff Tachell of Seattle 2 and 1.

Lanny Sawchuck of Uplands also defeated defeated Rich Friend of Everett 3 and 2; B.C.-champion Sandy Harper of Nanaimo downed Dick Zokol of Vancouver 3 and 2; Dave Donaldson of Vancouver beat Dick Price of Portland 6 and 4; Stu Holroyd of Gorge Vale beat Steve Berry of Vancouver 2 and 1; Laurie Kerr of Royal Colwood edged Mark Phillips of Portland 2 and 1; Ed Beauchemin of Glen Meadows beat Ken Bauman of Seattle 5 and 3; and Dave Delong downed Victoria-champion Don Gowan of Glen Meadows 3 and 2.

In the women's tourney, two other matches were decided by birdies on the 18th hole. Tari Pharr of Bellevue, Wash., birdied to defeat Val Westell of Vancouver and Lisa Smith of Tacoma, Wash. did the same to beat Kelly Antolock of Port Angeles, Wash.

Pat Derry of Royal Colwood, the only other Victorian to survive, downed Jane Cousins of Vancouver 2 and 1 while in other matches: defending-champion Nancy Peck of Eugene, Ore. ousted Flo McFall of Vancouver 1 up; Lynn Cooke of Vancouver beat Diane Phillips of Uplands 4 and 2; Vicky Woodcock of Vancouver downed Stephanie Drake of Redmond, Wash.; 4 and 3; and Liz Calver of Median, Wash., defeated Charisse Spada of Portland, Ore. 4 and 3.

DeGirolamo, who rallied for medal honors Tuesday, found herself in trouble in the early going. "I played sloppy golf in the beginning, but I got my game together on the back nine".

Branyik leads Gordon Head over Saanich

Gordon Head, Hampton and Esquimalt all scored victories Wednesday night in Greater Victoria Little League baseball playoffs.

With Steve Branyik hurling a three-hitter and stepping up to the plate for four hits, Gordon Head crushed Central Saanich 17-1 at Lambrick Park.

At Hillside Park, Glen Forbes pitched a two-hitter to lead Esquimalt to a 5-4 win over American and at Hollywood Park, Hampton downed Beacon Hill 9-4.

Women, boys down to 16s in Times tourney

Tennis players — like everyone else — are still battling the changeable weather, but finally we're down to the last 16 entrants in both the women's and junior boys' singles in the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks tournament.

Only two of the four seeded players are left in after the women's event starting field was whittled down from 41.

Lynn Derry ousted third seed Charlayne Joe 10-8. Fourth seeded Kathy Meredith had to struggle for a 7-5, 6-4 win over Joan Black. Second ranked Carolyn Jones made it through a bit easier with a 9-0 decision over Sheina Lerman but top seed Janine Prince was eliminated 9-4 by Pam Gaffield.

The junior boys' field started with 39 entrants and included in the last 16 are brothers John and Ken Chong of Happy Valley Road in Metchosin. If they both win one more match, they'll meet in the quarter-finals.

In late men's singles matches which didn't make it in time for last Thursday's result list, Frank Roberts edged Derek Peters 10-8, Keith Campbell beat Gary Paterson 6-1, 6-1, Mike Hanson downed Bryon Bradbury 9-5 and Neil Thompson inched past Neil Johnston in a 7-6, 6-4 thriller.

There are 32 players left in the men's singles which began with a huge field of 131. Next round in that event must be completed by Monday night and the whole summer-long Times tourney winds up with the semi-finals and finals of all events on Aug. 23 and 24 on Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts.

No Games, no money

CALGARY (CP) — The federal government says it may not help pay for a new hockey arena in Calgary unless the 1988 Winter Olympic Games are awarded to the city.

"It would be very difficult for the federal government to participate in construction of a stadium for an NHL franchise if Calgary was not awarded the Olympics," sports minister Gerald Regan said.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said earlier construction would go ahead with the federal government, the province and city paying equal amounts of the $45-million cost.

Sports car meet at Western Drivers from California, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Washington, British Columbia and Alaska will be on hand this weekend for an International Conference of Sports Car Clubs race at Western Speedway.

This is the eighth in a series of 12 races throughout the Pacific Northwest and is the final appearance of the season on the one-mile road-racing circuit at Western.

Approximately 18 members of the host Victoria Motor Sports Club will also be taking part.

Included in the list of Victorians are Gordie Munroe in a Chevron B-34, Larry Sandham in a Mini-Cooper "S", Bill Okell in a MGB, John Erith in Mini-Cooper "S" and Paul Bains in a Lola.

Two novice races are scheduled Saturday and seven 30-minute races are set to begin at 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Konihowski wins

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Diane Jones Konihowski has had a bad spring, but her summer is looking up.

After the upset over Canada's decision to boycott the Moscow Olympics and a series of bad breaks at three previous meets, the Edmonton athlete won the pentathlon at the Liberty Bell athletics meet Wednesday.

Competing in searing heat and humidity that sapped even the spectators, the 29-year-old pentathlon champion of the Commonwealth Games won two events and added strong showings in the other three to win the day-long competiton, her first triumph of the year.

"It's been a long day, long and hot," she said after finishing third in the 800-metre run.

Her time of two minutes, 12.6 seconds was good enough for 888 points, giving her a toal of 4,640 and the victory.

Marlene Harmon of the United States won the race in 2:10.17 and fellow American Linday Waltman was second in 2:10.43. They also finished second and third over-all.

Pam's no-hitter second of year

Pitcher Pam Jones did it again Wednesday night.

She hurled a no-hitter — her second of the season — taking her record to 16-2 and giving Island Dryco Breakers a 1-0 win over Vidalin Construction in a Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

The winning pitcher struck out 11, walked two, hit two batters and the only baserunner reached on an error.

In Wednesday's other game, Mavis Underwood pitched a six-hit shutout and went three-for-four at the plate as Butler Brothers downed Victoria Athletics 5-0.

In Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play at Central Park, Len Carolan threw a two-hitter and then had two hits and drove in a run as Ingraham Rodeway Inn beat Labatts 2-0.

Strathcona Hotel scored three runs in a sixth-inning burst and held on for a 5-4 win over Knowles Realty in Heywood Men's League action at Heywood Avenue Park.

Big hitter was Ash Douglas, who went three-for-four and put Strathcona ahead to stay with his two-run triple in the sixth.

Big rally by Farmers

Trailing 7-0, Farmer Construction broke open for three runs in the fifth inning, went on a five-run spree in the sixth and added another run in the seventh Wednesday night to snatch a 9-8 victory over Quadra Warehouse in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Szmidt smashes world swim record

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Szmidt accomplished his goal Wednesday night — a world record in the 400-metre freestyle — without the aid of a shaven head or anything else that swimmers believe give them an edge in the water.

"The real swim is inside your head," he said. "I don't need anything else."

Sporting short brown hair, the 6-foot-1 172-pounder didn't get any push from his opponents at the Canadian championships, pulling away in a record time of three minutes 50.49 seconds to bring the crowd to its feet at the Etobicoke Olympium.

"All year long it's been my goal to break the record, that's why I did a 3:56 this morning in preparation," said Szmidt, 18, who moved to Edmonton from Pointe Claire, Que., to join his former coach, Dave Johnson.

He won his heat Wednesday morning in 3:56.35, but it was slightly off his Canadian record time of 3:55.15 he set earlier this year.

In the final, however, he left his rivals behind with rapid strokes that enabled him to crack the world record of 3:51.20, set in February by Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union. Salnikov's record came in the Soviet Union's winter championships at Leningrad.

Szmidt, born in Montreal and holder of Canadian records for the 200 and 1,500-metre freestyles, went the first 100 in 56.88. He did the 200 in 1:55.57 and the 300 in 2:53.10.

His performance clinched a berth on Canada's honorary Olympic team which will be named at the conclusion of the five-day Esso Cup championships Saturday night. Most of the team, along with some others, will compete here next week in a dual meet against West Germany.

Games revival

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (Reuter) — A budget of $900,000 has been earmarked for the revived New Zealand Games to be held at venues throughout the country next January.

Bannister has lead

SQUAMISH (CP) — The going got tougher Wednesday at the B.C. Junior Golf championship, with only three golfers shooting par 72 compared with nine players under par and four at par during Tuesday's round.

Glenn Bannister of Abbotsford led the field of 150 after the second round at the Squamish Golf and Country Club, having shot a two-under-par Tuesday and even par Wednesday for a 142 total.

In second place was 17-year-old Casey Wells, of Pitt Meadows, who tied a course record with 67 on Tuesday. Wells blew to a 77 Wednesday for a total 144.

Also tied for second were Rick Gibson of Vancouver and Jamie Harper of Nanaimo.

In Avery Cup team play, the foursome of Rick Gibson, Keith Westover, Neil Crofts and Scott Minni from Vancouver won the 36-hole event with a combined total of 598, eight stroke better than defending champion Kelowna foursome of Grant Barnes, Glen Heuser, Scott Kraemer and Brad Whittle with 606.

Shower of aces breaks drought

BRIELLE, N.J. (AP) — After a drought of four years without anyone getting a hole-in-one at the Manasquan River Golf Club, three different players each stroked perfect shots in one day — on the same hole.

Another first for the club was the first hole-in-one by a woman, Barbara Mason, and all came on the 200-yard, par-three 15th hole.

Terminal Club trio wins

NORTH VANCOUVER — The Terminal Club trio of Selina Jarvis, Rose Postle and Martha Iker of New Westminster Wednesday won the B.C. women's triples lawn bowling championship at the North Vancouver Lawn Bowling Club.

The New Westminster team beat Kathy Finch, Dorothy Maer and Olive Bradley of Vancouver South in the final.

Victoria's trio of Jesse Kinneard, Flora Martin and Eleanor Jarvis lost in the semi-finals to the Finch squad.

Cable installed on 'hot' poles

The Telecommunications Workers Union has declared "hot" those telephone poles on which lines have been installed by Saanich Cablevision Ltd., the Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night.

Union delegate Dick Belfit said the trouble stems from the cable company installing main trunk and distribution lines, work formerly done by TWU members.

He said the companies obtained permission to do the work some time ago from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC).

However, Belfit said having cable company employees do the work is a violation of the TWU collective agreement with the B.C. Telephone Co.

He said the "hot" edict will apply only to TWU members.

"Our people won't be climbing those poles," Belfit said, explaining that in some new housing developments this might mean residents will have TV but no telephone service.

"We expect, quite possibly, a major confrontation on this."

There are four cable companies serving the Island south of the Malahat but only Saanich Cable is doing its own trunk line installations. The company serves Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney.

Ken Stanlake, one of the owners of Saanich Cable, said today the main reason the company is doing its own installations is to save money.

He said the CRTC gave the companies permission to do so in 1977 but it wasn't until about two months ago that Saanich Cable worked out the terms of a contract with B.C. Tel.

The company has to apply to the telephone company each time it wants to make an installation, he added. Saanich Cable is waiting for permits for nine placements, he said.

Stanlake admitted the problem is a thorny one but said it will work itself out "if everybody keeps their cool."

B.C. Tel spokesman Ken Metheral said from Vancouver today the company will be studying the implications of the TWU's "hot" edict action.

He added that permission for the cable companies to do the installations was granted by the CRTC, a federal regulatory body, and had nothing to do with the telephone company.

Labor opposes centre site

Victoria Labor Council delegates voted Wednesday night to oppose the proposed waterfront site for a convention centre.

They also favored the private sector picking up the tab for operating costs and any deficit the centre might incur.

Council secretary Jack Groves said taxpayers shouldn't have to pay for something which is going to benefit mainly the Victoria business community.

"There are many other things the city of Victoria can put up which would be of benefit to working people," he said.

John Schibli, council vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, said choice city property is not needed for a convention centre where people go to smoke cigars and hold meetings.

"Why squander a beautiful site for a convention centre?" he asked.

Others agreed but some spoke out in favor of the proposed harbor-front site.

Larry Ryan of the Service Employees International Union said he is as fond of the waterfront as anybody and walks around the area regularly.

However, he added, "I think it is a suitable site for a convention centre."

In other council business, Schibli said the building trades have some serious concerns about aspects of the new Employment Standards Act, recently introduced in the B.C. legislature.

For one thing, he said, it is unfortunate the legislation would only reduce the standard work week for those workers not covered by union contracts to 40 hours from 44.

He said union tradesmen now have a 37½-hour week and it is too bad the government doesn't give the same benefit to the unorganized.

Base pay up 8.4% for UVic faculty

University of Victoria faculty has been given an 8.4-per-cent basic salary increase by the board of governors.

The hike applies to all professional staff, about 700 professors, some of whom will also get special increments for merit amounting to about 1.5 per cent.

A settlement was reached without intervention after the board rejected a faculty association request in the spring to agree to binding arbitration, the practice at other universities in B.C.

Faculty had argued in favor of the process as a means of giving formal structure to negotiations, which the academic staff claims are conducted with a bias toward the university administration.

'Blackmailing' Ottawa fatal?

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett may find that "blackmailing his national government could be a fatal mistake," the president of the Liberal party in the province said Wednesday.

Shirley McLoughlin said in a telephone interview from Comox that Bennett's Social Credit government is turning on Ottawa to divert attention from its problems in the province.

"If he thinks Ottawa-bashing is going to help in B.C.," she said, "I think he's sadly mistaken."

Mrs. McLoughlin mentioned the on-again, off-again deal to pay for rail lines and port facilities in hopes of getting a deal to export coal from northeastern B.C. to Japan.

An agreement in principle was reached after meetings here last month between federal and provincial cabinet ministers, coal companies and Canadian National Railways. But the deal fell through and Bennett said his province would go it alone on the multi-million-dollar project.

McLoughlin said Bennett blamed the federal government for preventing a deal but it was the premier who "said one thing in one place and something else in another."

B.C. Liberals will set up a committee to respond to future statements by Bennett against the federal government, she added.

McLoughlin said Liberals in B.C., where the party has no MPs and no members in the provincial legislature, must look out for province's interests and don't want to act like robots in defending Ottawa. But at the same time, they want to stand up to Bennett.

The committee will be organized through the provincial association and local riding organizations, she said.

Stay of proceedings queried in court case

Prince Rupert NDP MLA Graham Lea wants to know why Crown counsel ordered a stay of proceedings in a case launched by a Queen Charlotte Islands fisherman against a logging firm and three government employees.

"Stay of proceedings is usually used by the Crown when there is insufficient evidence to proceed in court," the NDP member told the legislature Wednesday.

"Here the Crown was being charged by a citizen under a federal law. They took this action to stop the case from being heard."

Frederick Charles Bellas had laid charges against CIPA Industries Ltd. (formerly Q.C. Timber Ltd.), deputy provincial forests minister Thomas Michael Apsey, provincial government employee Jack A. Biickert and federal government employee Waldo E. Johnson, under a section of the federal Fisheries Act which states "No person shall carry on any work or undertaking that results in the harmful alteration, disruption or destruction of fish habitat."

The charges follow an incident at Riley Creek on the Queen Charlotte Islands where logging caused a bank to slide into a fish-spawning stream.

Crown counsel R.D. Miller entered the stay of proceedings — a legal manoeuvre which sets charges aside but allows them to be invoked at a later date — in Queen Charlotte City provincial court June 25 saying he had specific instructions to do so from the attorney-general.

However, Attorney-General Allan Williams told the legislature he gave no such instructions.

He said the stay of proceedings was entered in the case because the logging had the approval of the federal fisheries minister.

"That's a statutory defence and therefore the case could not be successful," Williams said. "It was an appropriate instance for the exercise of the power of stay.

"It is the authority of Crown counsel to do so and it is not a matter than need to be done in open court. It is done between Crown counsel and the clerk of the court."

Bennett refutes Alta. minister

Premier Bill Bennett on Wednesday dismissed as false an Alberta minister's suggestion that B.C. initiated last week's joint cabinet discussion concerning provincial control of railways in Western Canada.

It was reported last Sunday the B.C. and Alberta governments want to take regulatory control of Canadian National Railways and CP Rail west of Winnipeg.

This has since been disputed by members of the Alberta cabinet, though not by their B.C. counterparts. Alberta Transport Minister Henry Kroeger said earlier that jurisdiction over western railways "is certainly not our position and it didn't come into any of the discussions we had in Victoria."

Interviewed Wednesday, however, Kroeger said "there's a difference between what was discussed and what was proposed to be discussed." He said railway control had been suggested as an agenda item but Alberta had resisted its inclusion.

Not true, said Bennett.

But neither he nor B.C. Transport Minister Alex Fraser would say who initiated the discussion or shed any further light on the situation.

A joint B.C.-Alberta cabinet committee struck last Friday to consider transport issues of mutual concern is expected later this summer to examine formation of a Crown corporation that would run major rail lines now beyond provincial control. These likely would include B.C. Rail and the Northern Alberta Railway, a CN subsidiary.

Kroeger said he was not in a position to say whether Alberta wants regulatory control of western railways, nor whether he is philosophically in favor of such a proposal.

"I don't think we in Alberta are ready to raise it with the federal government."

Job history urged on medical record

Health care in B.C. could be improved if a central registry was formed to correlate job history information provided when a person seeks medical treatment, says Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson.

"We know in general terms that over 60 per cent of all cancers are environmental or job-related," the NDP member said. "However, a person's work history and his exposure to dust, chemicals, radiation, etc. are not a part of his medical record."

People seeking treatment should provide pertinent job information, Hanson said in a news release. As well, records now controlled by the Cancer Control Agency, the Health Surveillance System and the Medical Record Linkage should be integrated into a central registry.

Return of bus freight to Sooke eyed

The transit planning staff of the Capital Regional District was instructed Wednesday to report how freight service on public buses to Sooke could be reinstated and how much it would cost.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier moved the report be made Wednesday during a meeting of the transit planning and management committee. Since the CRD took over transportation from Pacific Coach Lines Ltd. no freight service has been available on public buses although a freight service is being provided by a private operator.

While Couvelier considered Sooke director Don Rittaler's request to have such a service provided on the public buses "to be a simple request" other directors did not agree.

Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall and the chairman, Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey, pointed out the public transportation system is to serve people and to provide a freight service for the Sooke area would be discriminating against other areas.

Sealey said she took exception to Rittaler's threat to ask Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm to have the Sooke electoral area made into a pilot project under a county system if the parcel service is not reinstated.

She told Rittaler the parcel service to Sooke is not restricted to "neatly-wrapped Birk's boxes" but could involve freight weighing up to 100 pounds.

Couvelier noted that the Urban Transit Authority claims the parcel service to Sooke, Sidney and the Saanich Peninsula lost $10,000 last year and said he personally would be willing to make a trade-off to have the service resumed.

In other business the committee decided to recommend the UTA be asked to provide some 30-foot Orion buses for improved suburban service, scheduled to go into operation on Jan. 1.

Twenty-nine new 40-foot General Motors buses have been ordered for the regional district but will not be available until next June.

Both Couvelier and Sealey said the smaller buses might be more appropriate for use on smaller country roads, Couvelier noting that people in the Cordova Bay area had made it clear they want their roads to be narrow and twisty.

He suggested CRD officials and municipal officials should get together to ascertain how many thousands of dollars could be saved in road construction costs by substitution of smaller buses.

It was also decided to enter into agreements for the sale of monthly bus passes to Camosun College and University of Victoria students, starting in September.

Vendors will not be able to charge more than $18.50 and must pay the Metropolitan Transit Operating Co. $18 for each pass. The pass will display the student's name and signature and use will be restricted to the person to whom it is issued.

Swartz Bay bus to stop closer to ferries?

Moving the Swartz Bay bus stop from outside the ferry terminal to beside the ferry slips was on the agenda for today's meeting of the Capital Regional District's transit planning and management committee.

The changed bus stop was proposed Wednesday by regional board chairman Jim Campbell at a meeting which had to be postponed until today because of the lack of a quorum.

Campbell said the 440 yards ferry foot pasengers are forced to walk through the long terminal buildings is a "frustrating uphill climb for people who are not sure they'll be able to catch the bus in time."

Campbell raised the issue Wednesday because he is unable to attend today's meeting which will consider a report on urban service on the Saanich Peninsula.

In the report, chief transit planner W.B. O'Brien recommends a new bus terminal at the ferry and suggests the lease of the Sidney depot office and waiting room be terminated. The information clerk should be reassigned to the Metropolitan Transit Operating Company.

His proposals are expected to win approval.

Other proposals, to take effect Jan. 1, include:

— All trips by the No. 70 Pat Bay bus to run along Veyaness Road and reconnect to the proposed route at the Pat Bay Highway via Keating Cross Road.

— The No. 74 West Saanich on the Monday-to-Friday schedule be extended to downtown Victoria at the Yates-Douglas terminal point.

— The southern terminus of the No. 74 West Saanich route for the Saturday schedule be on the parking lot of the B.C. Hydro offices at Royal Oak.

— The downtown layover point and routing for the suburban transit services be on the south side of Fairfield between Penwell and Blanshard.

— The No. 78 North Saanich route not run on that portion of the proposed route which extends to Madrona Drive. This change will route along West Saanich Road between Landsend Road and McTavish Road.

— The No. 75 Central Saanich to serve the Saanich Peninsula Hospital for all trips on the Monday-to-Friday and Saturday schedules.

— The evening and Sunday service to the hospital be added to the proposed No. 70 Pat Bay route.

— The master schedule timing point be at the Victoria terminus of the suburban services.

Cardiac cases crowded out?

Emergency wards are so crowded that cardiac patients are being left on stretchers at Vancouver General Hospital and ambulance attendants had to negotiate to get a stabbing victim admitted to St. Paul's Hospital this week, says Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster).

The emergency wards at both hospitals — the two largest in Vancouver—had to be closed Tuesday night because they were so crowded, the NDP Opposition health critic told the legislature Wednesday.

Cocke blamed the problem on low government priority for building a new emergency centre at Vancouver General which was approved in 1974.

However, Health Minister Rafe Mair said construction is proceeding at an appropriate pace and he expects the centre to be open next spring.

Cocke also criticized the health ministry for requiring some ambulance drivers in B.C. to work 14-hour shifts because crews are understaffed.

In a related debate, NDP MLA Rosemary Brown (Burnaby-Edmonds) said cutbacks by Mair in preventive programs were created expensive problems for the human resources ministry.

She said $14 million had been squandered on treating 100 heroin addicts while counselling programs for young people had been reduced.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

The outcome of many contracts depends on how the defenders' 26 cards are divided. Naturally, in such hands, declarer should shape his play so as to give himself the best mathematical chance for the contract.

Here is a typical case. The opening lead is a spade and three rounds of the suit are played, South ruffing the third. Declarer cashes the K-Q of trumps and the question is what to do next.

If he leads a low diamond to the jack and the finesse succeeds, South makes the contract without further ado. However, the finesse offers only a 50 percent chance of success and, if it loses, the contract will almost surely flounder with it. East returns a diamond and South later loses a club.

Declarer should not adopt this method of play. Instead, he should plot a different course that raises his chances well beyond the 50-50 level. The line of play that stands out a mile lies in cashing the A-K of clubs and playing a third round of the suit. One possibility is that East will win the third club, in which case South can claim the rest of the tricks, since East will be completely hors de combat.

If West wins the third club, as in the actual hand, he must yield a ruff and discard or return a diamond — and if he has either the queen or ten of diamonds the contract is icecold.

If West has the queen, he is automatically dead. If he has the ten and leads it, covering with the jack eliminates the diamond loser, while if he plays a low diamond away from the ten, declarer simply follows low from dummy to trap East's queen.

Finances got you down? Send Oral Roberts $67

TORONTO (CP) — Evangelist Oral Roberts is sending out two million letters urging people to solve their financial problems by sending him $67 or $670.

The seven-page letter offers a strategy for fighting financial difficulties that Roberts says was explained to him in a conversation with God.

"Don't try to solve your finances yourself," the letter states. "Do it God's way. Give to the church. Give to causes that God is in. And include this (Oral Roberts') ministry in your seeding and reaping. I feel the Lord is impressing you to sow $67."

At the end of the letter is a form where people can check off a donation of either $67 or $670. The prospective donor is asked to send the money within two weeks.

"If you do not have the $67, I believe God will show you where you can get it," the letter continues.

It explains that the number 67 was chosen because of a reading in the New Testament, Letter to the Galatians, chapter 6, verse 7: "For whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The letter chides people for putting their money in banks where it gets a lower return than planting it in the Lord's work.

Paul Tuz, president of Toronto's Better Business Bureau, says people should recognize that the letters are a solicitation. "When it takes that particular form, it ceases to be religion and becomes business."

Tuz says he has received only a handful of complaints about the letters, one from a man who had been asked by his aged mother living on her Canada pension if he could give her money because she could only collect $62 on her own.

"No religious organization that purports to care for the spiritual well-being of its followers should pressure people to donate a specific sum of money, without regard to their ability to pay and entice them by promising future financial rewards."

When evangelists send such letters to people on fixed incomes, they have stepped over the bounds of good taste, especially if the people are senior citizens who feel they are close to death, he said.

Tuz said the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association had admitted responsibility for the letter.

However, Rev. Quentin Rideour of Roberts's telephone ministry in Tulsa, Okla., said he didn't believe the letter was authentic.

"Brother Roberts has too much wisdom to do a thing like that."

But Chaplain Wilmer Smith, another associate in the ministry, said he knew of the letter and copies of it were sent to partners of the ministry — the two million people who write regularly to Roberts.

U.S. opens draft centres here

OTTAWA (CP) — United States draft registration centres have been opened across Canada to sign up all American men aged 19 and 20 living in the country, a U.S embassy official said today.

"It's a call for registration," the official said. "It's not a return to the draft."

The official said 19 year-olds can register July 21-25 at U.S. consulates in Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa (the consulate and the embassy), Montreal, Quebec City and Halifax. The others can register July 28-Aug. 1.

Failure to register could lead to fines of up to $10,000.

Denticare plan sought by CDA

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Dental Association wants a national denticare program supported by the provincial and federal governments, the association's new president said Wednesday.

Dr. Gilbert Uras of Grande Prairie, Alta., said in an interview the denticare program should be designed for people not covered by privately administered dental insurance.

Many people who are not privately insured may be prevented from receiving professional dental care, he said. Among them may be the self-employed, the unemployed, native peoples, the elderly and the handicapped.

A publicly financed dental plan should allow the dentist and patient complete "freedom of choice" of treatment without third party interference, he said.

Six provinces currently have dental plans but they only cover certain age brackets. In Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba they cover only children. In Alberta, senior citizens and children are covered.

U.S.-based unions on the wane here

OTTAWA (CP) — International unions with United States headquarters still dominate the Canadian labor movement but are gradually losing their foothold to Canadian unions, says a report released Wednesday.

"If present trends continue, Canadian unions and international unions will soon share equally the total Canadian union membership," says the report compiled by Statistics Canada.

The report says that in 1978 union membership grew by three per cent, to a total of 2,907,639 or about one-third of the country's workers. International unions had 52.5 per cent of the total membership but grew by by less than one per cent compared with 4.3 per cent for national unions and 7.8 per cent for government employees unions.

Teachers' chief defends strikes

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — Spending cuts, attacks from a misinformed public and insincere bargaining by school boards are prompting a rash of teachers' strikes in Canada, says the president of the Canadian Teachers Federation.

"It is likely that 1980 will have produced as many teachers' strikes as the entire previous decade," Patricia English said Wednesday at the opening session of the federation's annual meeting.

"Frustration with the collective bargaining process has certainly been one contributing factor."

Softer stand on pipe denied

Provincial Energy Minister Bob McClelland has denied an NDP charge that B.C. has softened its opposition to a pre-build natural gas pipeline project that might interfere with this province's natural gas exports.

McClelland said B.C. continues to oppose the Alberta project and no deal has been made with Edmonton to alter this stand.

In a speech to the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Premier Bennett had been taken in a political poker game at the July 11 meeting between the two western provincial governments by agreeing to support the pre-build project.

(The federal government is to decide today whether to allow the project to proceed. It is the first stage of the Alaska pipeline that would eventually carry natural gas from northern U.S. fields to markets in the midwest and northern California.

(For about seven years, until the line is completed, Canadian natural gas would be exported from Alberta into these U.S. markets as part of the pre-build program).

Barrett and McClelland agree the line would interfere with B.C.'s prospects for natural gas sales in Oregon and northern California. B.C. now sells natural gas in Washington State.

McClelland said B.C. has made a number of submissions to the National Energy Board, opposing the pre-build unless there are firm guarantees from the United States that the entire line will be built.

Proceeds from sales to the U.S. already have dropped significantly this year because of a recession there, cutting heavily into provincial revenues.

Before the cabinet meeting, Alberta Energy Minister Merv Leitch said B.C.'s concerns were not valid, and after the meeting any sign of a rift between the two governments was downplayed.

They announced that a joint resources policy committee would be set up to ensure that natural gas sales opportunities "are shared equitably and fairly by the two governments."

Barrett said that as a consequence of the meeting, the impression was left that B.C. endorses all of Alberta's positions — including wanting to see the pre-build go ahead.

The NDP tried to get an emergency debate on the matter Tuesday, but it was rejected by the Speaker. McClelland then made a statement Wednesday, reiterating B.C.'s opposition to the pre-build.

Barrett said McClelland — who presented the same opposition to federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde in Victoria Monday — is trying to clean up the impression that B.C. agrees with Alberta.

"I find it ironic that after spending months kicking in Ottawa's teeth, B.C. is forced to go crawling on its knees to the federal government wanting them to protect them from neighboring Alberta," he said.

McClelland said B.C.'s opposition to the pre-build has never waivered, adding that Barrett is simply jumping on the bandwagon the B.C. government has been on for two years.

And it is ridiculous, he said, for Barrett to "attack the only real friend B.C. has got in protecting our natural resources."

Meanwhile, in his speech to the chamber, Barrett also tackled the constitutional issue, saying it would be counter-productive for Prime Minister Trudeau to try to impose deadlines for bringing the constitution home.

The NDP leader urged prudence and caution, saying there should be no rush to complete the task.

Economic and energy questions should be settled first.

"I've never seen the British North America Act and I've never missed it," Barrett said.

"I've never lost any sleep over how it's doing over there in London."

It should be brought home some day but it is not an urgent question.

Nobody raises the issue at political meetings around B.C., Barrett said. It is a non-issue in the West.

Barrett drew applause at the chamber meeting by repeating a 1975 pledge an NDP government would construct a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island.

He said it was unfair that all heavily populated sections of B.C., except Vancouver Island, have access to low-priced energy.

Lalonde talks with Barrett irk McClelland

Energy Minister Bob McClelland has complained in a letter to his federal counterpart Marc Lalonde that relations between the two have been damaged because of a private meeting this week between Lalonde and Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Lalonde is expected to get the letter today, the day the federal cabinet is supposed to decide whether to let the controversial first phase of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline project proceed. The B.C. government last week told Ottawa it doesn't want the project to proceed.

A spokesman for McClelland Wednesday night leaked the text of a supposedly personal and confidential message addressed to Lalonde.

McClelland wrote he was "extremely disturbed" when Lalonde told him Monday he had arranged a formal meeting with the New Democratic Party leader.

"While I had no opportunity to raise my concern, given the circumstances of the meeting, I did not wish to let the opportunity pass without telling you that I believe the propriety of such an action is, to say the least, questionable, especially in view of the very delicate discussions which took place between us in our meeting . . ."

Lalonde met with McClelland for more than two hours Monday morning and with Barrett for about 45 minutes in the afternoon.

A spokesman in Lalonde's office in Ottawa said nothing of a confidential or governmental nature was discussed with Barrett or NDP energy critic Chris D'Arcy.

Barrett said he and D'Arcy spent most of the meeting with Lalonde discussing issues unrelated to those Lalonde and McClelland discussed.

"I can't believe he (McClelland) would be so stupid as to send a letter like that," Barrett said of the complaint. "It's unbelievable."

The Secretary of the Year in the U.S. is Jerry Randolph of Houston, who became a secretary "right out of high school" and is taking college courses to become a certified public accountant. She was selected at the National Secretaries' Association convention at the New York Hilton. Mrs. Randolph, who is 43 years old, has a 17-year-old son, raised by her live-in mother, and a husband who works for the space-shuttle program. She earns $500 a week with a mortuary company. When she recently told her boss she thought her salary should be half as much as his, his only reply was, "Well, I'm overpaid." Said the only man attending the convention, 47-year-old Ralph Dowling of Atlanta, who earns $20,000 as a legal secretary: "Men have been secretaries for at least 2,400 years."

Atwood

Ontario premier William Davis played ringmaster in Windsor during the Republican Party convention across the river in Detroit. Davis took Michigan governor William Milliken through the $400,000 exhibit set up to promote the virtues of Ontario to any wealthy Republican who happens along. Davis said the policies of Ronald Reagan "sound like my speeches . . . and the policies I've introduced."

There are no reports of the social fabric disintegrating outside Ontario, where the film The Tin Drum is playing to large audiences and making dandy profits. Still, the new Ontario Censor Board chairman Mary Brown thinks the film is not for Ontario adults. Distributor Michael Skewes, beneficiary of the Ontario board's insistence on cutting three nude scenes, says he's taken in $237,000 in British Columbia (the film is now playing in Victoria), Alberta and Manitoba. Quebec has brought in an "amazing" $380,000 for distributor Maurice Attias in just 13 weeks.

Canadian author Margaret Atwood and husband Graeme Gibson, well-known for her affection of her country home near Alliston, Ont., have bought a house in downtown Toronto and plan to move into it in the fall. "Our four-year-old child is ready for school," Atwood says, "and she can't do that out here, except maybe play school. "Also I am vice-president of the Writers Union and if I don't have a nervous breakdown over the job I'll be chairman next year. We need to be in town." Their Alliston home has been rented, though, not sold.

Dear Abby:

Please print this as an open letter to all well-meaning daughters and sons who bring a widowed parent to live near them, setting mama or papa up in a small, cheerful apartment with a good address. They seem to think that is sufficient.

These older single parents have left behind friendships of many years, with roots deeply imbedded in a community of familiar faces, places to shop and places to go.

Now, suddenly, they are thrown into a strange, unfamiliar setting where they are expected to make new friends and "start over" in the twilight of their lives.

Well-meaning children should first try to get their parents into an apartment complex where there are many elderly people like themselves. They should find out what is offered in the way of activities for the older person, and also entertain for them, inviting the parents of their friends.

Young people haven't the foggiest notion of how difficult it is for a lone parent to "start over" in a strange environment. How could they? They have never had to do it.

Dear Abby:

We have a very fine 16-year-old son who wants to be a nurse! Abby, he is bright and ambitious, but his choice of a profession is a big disappointment to his father and me. How can we convince him that nursing is a profession for women, not men?

Parents

Dear Parents:

Although currently most nurses are women, more and more men are entering the field, and for a good reason: Many male patients are much more comfortable with a male nurse than a female.

Fortunately, many young people today are selecting their careers based on their own interests and abilities rather than on which sex is dominant in a given field — witness the number of female physicians, engineers, lawyers.

Dear Abby:

A few days ago my roommate Anita borrowed a typewriter and while using it a key broke.

She told the owner of the typewriter that it had broken and said she would take care of having it fixed. Nothing was said about who would pay for its repair.

The charge for repairing the typewriter was about $20. Anita feels that she should not be expected to foot the entire bill because she insists that she was using the typewriter correctly when the key broke, and therefore it wasn't her fault.

I think that since the typewriter broke while Anita was using it, she should pay for fixing it.

Double-spaced

Dear Spaced:

Even though Anita may not have been responsible for the breakage, the typewriter was in perfect working order when she borrowed it and should be returned in the same condition.

Patricia Whyte says secretary's days are numbered

TORONTO (CP) — With experts predicting that computerized word processors will bring the same ruthless efficiency to white-collar work that the production line brought to 19th-century factories, some typists and secretaries say their days may be numbered.

"I don't see being a secretary for 30 or 40 years, because the job won't be there," said Lee-Anna Wright. "You don't get a one-to-one relationship with a boss anymore."

Mrs. Wright, 29, is a secretary with the consulting firm of Hickling-Johnson Ltd., which uses word-processing computers and companion printers.

There has been tremendous growth in the field since IBM introduced word-processing typewriters with memory capacities in the mid-1960s.

Office systems now provide editing, filing, graphics and photo-composition and printout capacities.

Last year, 71,000 word processors were sold in the United States, a 23-per-cent increase over the previous year. And experts estimate that between $1.8 million and $2 million worth of word processors were sold in North America last year.

In 1964, fresh out of high school, Marilyn Weir was hired at $64 a week by Ontario Hydro to do secretarial work.

At the start of every month, she began typing on ditto paper a several-hundred-page voltage report — typing, correcting, submitting a draft to an engineer, retyping, submitting another draft and retyping again.

If she was lucky, she would finish in time to begin next month's report.

"Today, you could do the same job in a day or less on the word processor and not end up going home being covered all over, feet to socks, in ditto blue. You make your few changes and send them through to the word printer and it does all the work."

Robert Fabian, a former computer science professor at York University in Toronto and now a consultant in the field, said experts estimate there is a 25-per-cent increase in typing efficiency with the word processors, which means one out of 10 secretaries will lose their jobs.

One reason more jobs aren't lost is because managers have increased the number of times they revise documents because revision is so much easier. And the introduction of computers in offices has also created a number of new more highly-skilled jobs, particularly for women.

But, the pressure for management to use word processors may become inexorable if they fall to the $300 to $1,000 price range which some experts predict for 1990.

Business courses busy with promotion seekers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women executives are entering master of business administration programs in their search for senior management positions.

At the University of B.C., 82 women — 25 per cent of the total class — were registered in the current academic year. The university offers a two-year, full-time MBA program as well as part-time evening studies.

For four years after Simon Fraser University's MBA program began in 1968, no women enrolled, but now women constitute about 20 per cent of the class.

A fairly wide variety of women are showing interest in the MBA program for a number of reasons, says Roger Vergin, director of the Simon Fraser course.

"There are some who have the background and the capability to move into executive positions, but because of prejudice or whatever within the business world, they have not been able to do so," he says.

"In a lot of other cases, they have been advanced to management positions without formal training and are seeking to obtain it," he adds.

The Simon Fraser program, called an executive MBA program, is designed specifically to prepare mid-career individuals for senior management.

The program demands a great deal of motivation, Vergin says.

"They (students) probably are putting in 20 to 25 hours a week in classes and assignments in addition to their full-time jobs which are often quite responsible positions."

Pill instructions not set haphazardly

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Why are some prescribed pills taken before meals while others are taken during or after meals? This has always been confusing to me.

Miss E.M.

Dear Miss M.:

When drugs are prescribed, the doctor knows their objective and how best to achieve it. When instructions are given, they should be carefully followed. Those instructions are not haphazard.

Some medicines are known to be irritating to the lining of the stomach, especially when it is empty. It is for this reason that such drugs are taken with meals, so that they can mix with the food. Thus they do not lie in contact with the delicate lining of the stomach.

Other drugs may be of a group that are more readily absorbed into the bloodstream from an empty stomach. These, then, are taken before meals for rapid and maximum effectiveness.

Another group of drugs may be destroyed by the stomach juices and acid. Therefore these had best be taken at intervals when the juices and acid are at a miminum.

Problems of drug-taking become even more complicated. Some drugs, when taken with others, may lose their effectiveness. In some instances, two drugs may be enhanced by each other's presence.

This is only a small cross-section of the possibilities that are involved in the prescription and administration of drugs. Consequently it is most important that the original instructions of the doctor be followed without any "personal variation."

Many ongoing studies have tried to explain why some people suddenly decide that they have "had enough" and stop taking drugs that are prescribed for them. This lack of compliance adversely affects people, especially those with high blood pressure, heart disease and diabetes.

Dear Doctor:

My eldest son has psoriasis which I know is not contagious — but can you tell what causes it?

Mrs. R.O.

Dear Mrs. O.:

There is an hereditary factor in psoriatics which may be triggered by environmental causes, injury, illness and even normal stress. The redness, itching, pain and scales of affected areas are the result of abnormally rapid skin cell growth.

Where normal skin cells grow and die on a month-long cycle, psoriatic areas see the same process take place in about a week — leaving no time for "new" skin to season. Thus the raw red patches found under the excess surface skin cells (scale) when it is removed.

Booklet provides guide to varied nutrition ideas

nutrition matters
dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

"Will eating yogurt help me to lose weight?"

"Is raw milk better than pasteurized milk?"

"Which bread is best — whole wheat, white or rye?"

"Which margarine is best?"

These are just a few of the many nutrition questions that are answered in a recently published book The Nuts and Bolts of Nutrition.

The Ontario Dietetic Association and the Ontario Hospital Association have joined forces to produce this welcome new source of reliable nutrition information. And reliable, it is, as it was written by the professional dieticians and nutritionists who comprise the membership of this very active provincial dietetic association.

Many of the 75 questions that are answered in the book are taken mainly from queries by consumers who have access to "Dial-a-Dietician", a voluntary public service sponsored by ODA in cooperation with the Ontario Heart Foundation.

In Toronto and Kingston, the only two Ontario units fortunate to have access to this unique service, questions concerning food and nutrition can be placed. Just check your phone book for numbers if you live there or in Vancouver where a similar service operates for Lower Mainland residents.

Answers are given the following day by dieticians who are working in hospitals, local health units, private practice and in industry and those answers have been compiled in a well organized fashion in this handy reference book.

The book doesn't pretend to be able to give you all the answers. In 72 pages, it simply can't. But you will find chapters on such timely topics as weight control, food additives, vitamin supplements and the nutrition problems encountered at various stages of our life cycle.

And, in case you need additional information there are addresses and phonenumbers of other reliable sources.

The book, in our opinion, would make good reading for your entire family. It's available by sending a cheque or money order for $4.95 to The Nuts amd Bolts of Nutrition, The Ontario Hospital Association, 150 Ferrand Drive, Don Mills, Ontario M3B 1H6.

Here's a sneak preview in case you'd like to know the answers to the questions posed above.

1. No. Yogurt, like any other food, doesn't have any magical reducing powers. One serving of plain yogurt (125mL) made from partly skimmed milk has less than 100 calories. But many yogurts are sweetened and flavored with fruit, sugar or honey. This can double the calories!

2. Definitely not. Pasteurization of milk is one of the main reasons that tuberculosis is no longer a major health hazard in Canada. It's illegal to sell unpasteurized milk.

3. We prefer 100 percent whole wheat — it still contains nearly all the goodness of the whole wheat kernel. When flour is refined, the outer bran coating and the wheat germ are removed. But all white flour in Canada that's used for baked produets must be enriched with thiamin, riboflavin and niacin and iron. Sometimes other vitamins and minerals are added.

4. A difficult question to answer in general terms! You've got to readhhhose labels to find the percentage of polyunsaturated fatty acids and the percentage of saturated fatty acids listed. You won't find them on all the labels, because manufacturers aren't allowed to mention polyunsaturated fatty acids unless their margarine contains at least 25 per cent polyunsaturates. All of these margarines are soft margarines.

Similarly, read the labels on cooking oils. If there is more than 40 percent of polyunsaturated fatty acids in the oils, it can be listed on the label. The oils that are highest in polyunsaturated fatty acids are safflower, sunflower and corn oil.

IT'S HER BALLPARK and no one is going to argue with her as she gets a grip on Toronto Blue Jays catcher Ernie Whitt in pre-game height contest held recently. Sandy Allen, the undisputed winner, is also entered in the Guiness Book of World Records for her height of seven feet, seven and one-quarter inches

Family size cut in half

MONTREAL (CP) — A generation ago in Quebec you were considered to have done your duty after eight, 10 or even 12 children. You could have gotten away with four, maybe.

But families that size have gone the way of sermons about whom to vote for. The birth rate across Canada — and in Quebec — has been halved in the last 20 years.

In their place are no-child, one-child and two-children families.

Married couples who have decided not to have children say they want their freedom and the fun of a two-income ifestyle. Couples who stop at one child say the same thing.

Those with two children talk about the luxuries they can afford to give their children and how, with more than two, they couldn't provide things like ballet classes and skating lessons.

A generation ago, in the 1950s, the average number of children per household in Canada was 2.7. By 1977, it was 1.6.

The no-child family is a new phenomenon. Sociologists say it reflects our changing values and is related to women's entry into the labor force.

"The decline in the birth rate began in 1960," says Michael Sullivan, a McGill University sociologist.

"In the 1960s, women started to think about careers. The birth-control pill and other forms of contraception came on the market.

"Women were freer to choose whether to have children. Many of them chose not to have any or to postpone their decision.

After a low birth rate during the 1930s, the baby boom peaked in 1959 when 479,000 children were born in Canada, in a population of 18 million. That was the highest number ever. In 1978 (population about 23 million) there were 358,000 births.

Cost, too, is a factor. But some specialists think inflation and rising prices aren't directly related to family size. It's not that people can't afford more children, it's that they spend their earnings in different ways.

Changing Times magazine reports that a child born in 1958 would cost about $30,000 to raise to the age of 18. A child born today might cost $85,000 to raise, considering larger accommodations, a bigger car, food and holidays.

"It sounds inflated," says Sullivan, "but children today have a longer dependncy."

"In the old days, a child would finish high school and by the age of 16 or 17 would be on his own. Today kids are dependent on their parents until they're 25 or 26. Parents are expected to pay for a year in Europe, for university, and then maybe graduate work.

"Supporting a family takes two-thirds of your salary," estimates life insurance agent Seymour Rimer. "It doesn't matter what your salary is, the proportion stays the same."

"People who make more spend more."

The family itself is changing, says Lucette Hansen, a counsellor with Planned Parenthood of Montreal.

People are mor mobile today, and careers often determine where a couple lives. It may be far away from grandmothers and aunts — the free babysitters who would willingly share bringing up a baby.

"The trend is towards the one-child family," says Hansen, 55, who adds that if she were getting married today she wouldn't have had her four kids.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND can be a burden when hitchhiking, but not when he's dressed in glasses and pyjamas. Bruce Manhard and Brenda Guthrie, of Sault St. Marie, have found a great way to attract attention on the road in the form of Whiskey, a five-year-old poodle. Poodle power has taken them more than 1000 kilometres in less than two days.

Before the judge

A 23-year-old man caught with restricted drugs in his possession Tuesday night was given a 30-day jail sentence Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

Edwin William Briggs, of 645 Pine, pleaded guilty to possession of LSD and MDA and was given concurrent sentences by Judge Blake Allan.

Crown counsel Keith Bracken told the court Briggs was stopped by Victoria police shortly after 6 p.m. in the 1100-block Langley. In a cigarette package found on him, police discovered 10 "hits" of LSD and six "folds" of MDA.

Allan was informed Briggs had been unemployed for about a year and was on social assistance.

A 44-year-old man serving a one-year sentence at Oakalla on the Lower Mainland was given an additional 30 days after pleading guilty to two counts of mischief causing wilful damage.

Glenn Roland Fry, who is serving a one-year term imposed in April, was given consecutive, 15-day sentences.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said RCMP were called Jan. 29 to the Sidney Hotel, where they found paint spread around the second floor. There was paint on the couch, door knob of the room where Fry was found, and palm prints on other parts of the hall.

Duty legal aid lawyer Barry Mah Ming said Fry was staying at the hotel but gave his room to a man and woman who stole the television set and took the key with them when they left. This forced Fry to sleep in a closet, Mah Ming continued.

While in the closet, Fry tripped over a can of paint, which spilled all over him.

"I just don't believe that," commented Allan before passing sentence.

Donat Frederick Limoges, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to obtaining food by fraud from Don Mee's Restaurant, 538 Fisgard.

Smith said Limoges obtained the meal Tuesday and had no money to pay for it.

Limoges was convicted of the same offence July 2 when he and a companion had steaks, prawns and some wine at Romeo's Place and were not able to pay the $29.50 bill. He was fined $50 on that occasion, placed on six months probation, and ordered to make restitution.

Two men were given 14-day jail sentences for drinking-driving offences.

Allan imposed the jail term on Andrew Richard Calder, 20, of HMCS Terra Nova, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving. Calder had been convicted in Victoria of the same offence last August when he was fined $300.

Judge Harold Alder imposed the same sentence on 45-year-old Roderick Blanchard, of 335 St. James, after finding him guilty of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08. Alder allowed Blanchard, who was convicted Jan. 4, 1978, in Victoria of the same offence, to serve his sentence on weekends.

Fined $500 each for impaired driving were Frederick Bertram Thomas, 21, of Duncan, and Robert Joseph Boucher, 30, of HMCS Restigouche.

Boucher was also fined $250 for refusing a breath test demand made by police.

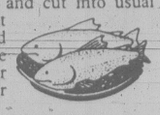
I love to eat fish at least once a week—yet hate to serve the same recipe time after time. Therefore, I welcome new ways to cook fish. Clean fish and cut into usual portions, season with salt and pepper and let stand for about five minutes. Dip fish in salad dressing diluted with water until it has the consistency of cream. Then roll fish in flour or cracker crumbs and pan fry in butter or margarine.



Last weekend my family and I took advantage of the nice weather and gave the cottage a thorough cleaning job. Everyone chipped in with the work... even my parents. But after a long day of scrubbing floors and cleaning windows everyone was complaining about stiff, tired backs and it appeared as if the evening's fun would have to be shelved. Thank goodness I always keep a supply of Dodds Pills in the economy size at the cottage too! With Dodds on hand everyone was back on their feet in no time...

Dodds Pills make our summers more enjoyable.

Fisheries study disputed

A federal paper has missed the point in the debate over a provincial say in control of offshore fisheries, B.C. Environment Minister Stephen Rogers said Wednesday.

The paper, released Tuesday in Halifax, says the coastal provinces have not made a convincing case on why Ottawa should give them a greater role in offshore fisheries management.

Rogers disagrees, claiming Ottawa has missed the point.

Rather, Rogers says, it is that fisheries are a provincial resource and should be administered by the provinces.

Development a threat to Cordova Bay farm

A 30-acre Saanich farm is being threatened by residential development on all sides, the son of a Cordova Bay pioneer told council's standing committee Wednesday.

Raymond Galey, 4838 Cordova Bay Road, said nearby development leaves no room for expansion.

A move to Central Saanich is necessary if the operation is to survive, he said.

The Cordova Bay community plan will not be reviewed for another five years.

In other business, council couldn't reach a decision on whether to include Claremont Poultry Farm in the sewer enterprise area.

Mayor Mel Couvelier suggested the farm be included in a five-year sewer installation project so the owners can sell the property for residential development and relocate in a less populated area.

Residents have been complaining about flies and raw sewage on the property.

But Ald. Irene Block said she didn't want to change the three-phase sewer project.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said the poultry farm is in the ALR and there is no guarantee that residential development would occur after the property was sewered.

Minnie Mountain lots to go up for sale soon

Residential lots in the expensive Minnie Mountain subdivision will go on sale soon, a spokesman for the Ten Mile Point development said Wednesday.

Servicing of the 14 lots in the first phase of the six-stage development is almost complete, a spokesman for R&M Developments said.

The Victoria company acquired the 70-acre property from Broadmead Farms after a lengthy court battle with a Cadboro Bay residents group.

The residents group lost its case to halt the mixed development of apartments, townhouses and single family homes after two years in court.

First homes should be finished in a year and the entire project completed in five years.

Developers have planned 77 separate homes on 32 acres, 62 townhouse units on nine acres and an apartment building. Tennis courts and walking trails will be also be constructed on the property.

Nuclear plant site change welcomed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The news that two nuclear power plants will not be built in Washington state near Sedro Woolley was welcomed Wednesday by B.C. environmentalists.

David Garrick of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said his group had been concerned about the possibility of earthquake or volcanic activity damaging the plants.

But he warned that relocating the plants at the Hanford nuclear reservation near Yakima in southeast Washington state, as proposed by Puget Sound Power and Light Co., would not put B.C. out of disaster range.

THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

OUTBOUND BACK PACK
(4 to be won)

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game Rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:

Victoria Press

A new puzzle will appear each day, but the weekly winners will be selected from all entries submitted for the previous week's puzzles.

To be eligible, your entry must be received by 5:30 p.m. on the Thursday following the week the puzzle was published.

70,000 fans of The Who behave

TORONTO (CP) — Despite some anxious moments for city officials, promoters and the British band The Who, a huge Wednesday night concert at Exibition Stadium came off with relatively few hitches as more than 70,000 music fans chose rocking over rioting.

The lengthy open-air concert, which also featured the popular rock acts Heart and J. Geils Band, attracted the largest crowd ever at the Toronto baseball park, which has a seating capacity of 54,000. The surplus crowd was packed standing on the field of the stadium in what is known as "festival seating."

It was this arrangement that most worried Toronto officials, whose petition to cancel the concert was denied Tuesday by the Ontario Supreme Court.

A festival seating-type concert by The Who last year in Cincinnati ended in tragedy as 11 young fans were asphyxiated in a rush at the gates.

Police arrested 61 people at the Toronto concert, mainly for possession of marijuana and hashish and for drinking offences. "When only 61 people are arrested in a crowd of 70,000 you know everything was under control," said an officer with Metropolitan Toronto Police.

Reports of some Toronto fans suffering heat exhaustion involved those who arrived at the stadium in early afternoon to get the closest possible positions to the stage. Many concert goers were still filtering in when J. Geils, the opening act, came on at 6:45 p.m.

The Who's performance, their second in Toronto this year, was flawless, with dazzling lighting and a bell-clear sound system hightening the force of their long-proven brand of punchy rock.

Virtually every tune was greeted with appreciative whistles and hollers but, as could be expected, it was the most familiar tunes that drove the crowd wild, particularly the recent hit Who Are You.

A sensuous story of natural love.
Two children, a boy and a girl, are shipwrecked on a lost tropical island . . . they must survive, somehow alone. But nature is kind to them. The boy grows tall. The girl beautiful.
They swim naked over coral reefs. They run in a cathedral of trees. And when their love happens, it is as natural as the sea itself, and as powerful. Love as nature intended it to be.

Nylons the best in 50 years?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

With voices like theirs, plus a volcanic supply of imagination and energy, who needs instruments?

The Nylons are a phenomenon — just maybe the greatest in the popular idiom to surface in Canada in 50 years. A male quartet that has brought the term 'a capella' into the public domain.

As light plucks them out of the enveloping dark of the McPherson stage, there they are — four young men dressed in black, no guitars, no basses, no drums. Just voices; and mikes dressed in nylons.

But oh my, what they can do with those voices!

Virtuoso is a word in danger of being over-used at the moment with the summer population of international music stars in the city. But virtuoso is the word for the Nylons and not more aptly applied to any performance.

They command an incredible range of vocal color, including wind, percussion and string sounds. Thigh-slapping, hand claps and articulate feet sustain the rhythms while that intoxicating blend of voices ranging from a deep bass to a clear falsetto utter the songs of the '50s and '60s.

The Nylons' reputation, not much more than a year in the making, had surged ahead of them, sparked by a brief appearance at The Belfry a few months ago. So the jam-packed McPherson audience was ready for them and explosively with them from the first note to the final encore.

Their finale of The Lion Sleeps Tonight is an experience that will echo and reecho in the mind; sustained moments of wonderful and extraordinary sound in a presentation that blazes with dramatic imagination, is strikingly lit and spine-tingling.

The entire performance from beginning to end is dramatically conceived with choreographed movement and ingenious lighting; with delightful campy episodes like the zoot-suited '30s episode and humor like the Silhoutte on the Shade number that featured former Victorian Ralph Cole.

Those voices that are woven into such amazing textures by Cole, Paul Cooper, Marc Connors and Claude Morrison of the rare falsetto, are shining satin-smooth and beautifully chorded in something like Eli's Coming, sensual in Cooper's own On the Roof, a perfect back-up to Connors' Ladder to Heaven.

Nobody can be 100 per cent sure about future greatness, but I'm as close as I'll ever be in projecting that-The Nylons are due to become one of the big names on the international scene.

Squeeze yourself into the McPherson before they end their engagement there on Saturday.

B.C. residents killed in Alta.

VERMILION, Alta. (CP) — Three residents of British Columbia died Tuesday in a car-truck crash near Vermilion, 170 kilometres east of Edmonton.

RCMP identified the victims as Barbara Schwab, 44, her son Christopher, 12, both of Richmond, and Mrs. Schwab's daughter, Debbie McFarland of Fort St. John.

The wet jet set hits Victoria

The jet ski is to water what the snowmobile is to snow.

It's a small one-person vessel that travels quickly with easy manoeuvrability.

To show off the new units six jet ski enthusiasts will race from Vancouver to Victoria on Saturday.

They will leave English Bay in Vancouver at 9:30 a.m. and arrive in the Inner Harbor late in the afternoon.

The machines are fun and easy to operate, says Kyle Jackson, one of the race organizers.

"If you fall off, you just get back on again," he says, noting that the machine is designed to slowly circle if it loses its rider.

Jackson would like the jet ski race to become an annual event, like the Nanaimo Bathtub Race or the Vancouver Sea Festival.

The jet ski race won't be the only Victoria-Vancouver event on Saturday.

A three-man kite sailing attempt to break the world's distance record in the sport will take place about the same time.

Lasting proposition.

A good deal better for a good deal longer.

When you compare the car you get with the price you pay, the Volkswagen Rabbit is an honest proposition. And not just when you buy it, but as you drive it for years to come.

The Rabbit is designed and built to take the bumps out of roads, the sting out of gas prices, the bite out of weather, and put the joy back in driving.

Come in soon and listen to our lasting proposition.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephone lines are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the grass to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his names sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Popping blazes on peak battled

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Firefighters wading through 35 centimetres of ash have begun the hazardous job of extinguishing the slowly smoldering fires ignited when Mount St. Helens exploded May 18.

"We have to make sure no crew is more than 15 minutes from a helicopter," Jim Bradley, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

He said that when the mountain erupted May 18, it sparked a huge forest fire immediately. But ash dumped from the eruption quickly buried the fire, which has been smoldering since and has begun to pop up as small blazes: "We're afraid if we allow this fire to smolder, the wind could blow it into the dead timber that is still standing and . . . could reach the green timber."

Civil war jitters

BEIRUT (AP) — Fears of a renewal of the Lebanese civil war grew today as Yasser Arafat called for a general mobilization of his Palestine Liberation Organization to counter new Christian threats.

Arafat accused Israel and the Phalangists, Lebanon's most powerful Christian party, of a "plot to liquidate the guerrilla movement."

Syria's dominant Baath Socialist party accused the Phalangists of partitioning Lebanon as a prelude to trying to take over the rest of the country. It indicated the 22,000 Syrian soldiers in Lebanon would block this.

Bashir Gemayel, son of Phalange party chief Pierre Gemayel, and his 20,000 Phalangist militiamen in three days of heavy fighting last week shattered the Tigers militia of former president Camille Chamoun's National Liberal party. This gave the Gemayels undisputed control of East Beirut, the Lebanese capital's Christian half, and much of the 2,100 square kilometres of Christian hinterland to the north and northeast. The forces of former president Suleiman Franjieh, Lebanon's third Christian warlord, still control the northernmost part of the Christian territory.

Suzuki official

TOKYO (Reuter) — Zenko Suzuki became prime minister of Japan today, succeeding the late Masayoshi Ohira. New leader of the governing Liberal Democratic party, Suzuki, 69, won the post by a majority vote in the main legislative lower house of parliament.

U.S. runs 'big ear' spying operation in U.K.?

LONDON (AP) — The leftist weekly New Statesman said today that the U.S. National Security Agency is running a "big ear" spying operation on government, corporation and individual telephone and Telex lines throughout Europe from a secret telecommunications centre in northern England.

There was no immediate comment from U.S. officials, but both the British defence ministry and the post office denied the claim, saying the facility was a "relay communications centre for United States forces in Europe, its main purpose being rapid and secure communications."

Journalists Duncan Campbell and Linda Melvern named the centre as the closely guarded Menwith Hill base in remote moorland in Yorkshire County 13 kilometres west of the spa town of Harrogate and about 270 km north of London.

They said the centre, run in close partnership with the British post office, is the largest and most secret civilian listening post maintained by the agency outside the United States. "Unless the KGB (Soviet security police) has something even bigger, (it) appears to be the biggest tapping centre in the world."

Campbell, a communications expert, and Melvern wrote: "The base is so secret that even trivial details of its facilities are a secret from the United States Congress."

The two writers said that more than 800 employees at the centre work round the clock "sifting the communications of private citizens, corporations and governments for information of political or economic value to the U.S. intelligence community."

Campbell and Melvern said the operation plays "a much bigger role" in a "massive exercise in spying on civil and commercial communications."

Among unnamed sources they quoted were:

— A former analyst with the U.S National Security Agency who said he has seen a document giving the base authority for "tapping the telephone lines to Europe;"

— A high-ranking intelligence consultant still working for the U.S. intelligence community who "told us that he was aware of Menwith Hill's elaborate telephone- and Telex-tapping facilities;"

— A former British military officer who had visited the centre, which he said housed "hundreds of millions of dollars worth of computer, communications and satellite tracking equipment."

Campbell's earlier allegations in the New Statesman that Britain is running its own widespread internal eavesdropping operation embarrassed the government last February.

Campbell, 27, reported at that time that the British secret service and police based in London office buildings use a phone-tapping and bugging operation codenamed Tinkerbell to spy on embassies, even friendly ones like the United States, and "thousands" of diplomats, lawmakers, union leaders.

Slow but sure cure for couch

Q. "How do I get rid of couch grass in my front lawn?"

I don't suppose there is any one question I get more often than this one. I'm an advocate of a very basic approach to this problem — that of following a strict mowing routine. Set the mower so it cuts at the two-inch level, longer than most people like to leave their grass but essential to this method.

Mow your lawn at least twice a week and give your lawn a regular feeding of good lawn fertilizer at least once a month throughout the growing season. The coarse grasses like couch grow faster than the good stuff, so the couch gradually dies out with the constant beheading. It takes diligence but it's effective.

Q. "I expect to be doing quite a bit of travelling between Canada and the U.S. in the next few months and would like to bring back some plantings. What are the regulations concerning this?"

There are numerous rules and regulations with respect to the movement of nursery stock to B.C. and Canada aimed at preventing the introduction of diseases and pests that don't already exist in our part of the world.

For example, bringing in of soil is prohibited from all off-shore countries and certain states and counties of the U.S. because of the danger of bringing in soil-borne diseases and/or nematodes. Pines, except seeds, from other countries and provinces must be fumigated lest they be accompanied by the European Pine shoot moth and all species of fir are prohibited entry into B.C., regardless of source, for fear of the balsam woolly aphid.

You can obtain a copy of the regulations relating to movement of nursery stock into B.C. by writing: Plant Products and Quarantine, Food Production and Inspection Branch, Agriculture Canada, Room 380, 5000 Kingsway, Burnaby, V5H 2E4.

Q. "My raspberry row has a tendency to get quite weedy and I'm afraid to hoe around them because of their shallow root system. What to do?"

Among the biggest complaints registered by home raspberry growers is the tendency for the row to become weedy. The safest way to deal with the problem is to clean the bed out by hand, then apply granular weed preventer which kills all germinating seeds, weeds and otherwise, for several months.

Personally, I prefer to avoid the chemical approach to weed control when at all possible. I like to clean out the patch by hand, then apply several inches of well-rotted sawdust mulch which benefits the raspberries as well as keeps the weeds under reasonable control.

Q. "Earlier this season, you advised using grass clippings as a mulch between the vegetable rows. I followed this suggestion but find they become slimy and very smelly. Have I done something wrong?"

Perhaps I didn't emphasize strongly enough that only a thin layer of clippings should be applied at a time for a too-thick layer will become slimy and smelly. Scatter them thinly and if you still have a bunch left over you can put these into your compost for they'll help activate the pile.

Another aspect that can't be over-emphasized is that when you do use your grass clippings as a mulch, particularly around sensitives like tomatoes, make sure they have no trace of weed killer for these fumes could make your plants very sick indeed. If you can detect the slightest weed-killer odor, set them aside for a week before using around your plants.

Q. "This is my first year with a vegetable garden and I've put in quite a few tomato plants. One of my neighbors told me a horror story about something called blossom-end rot. How do I avoid it?"

Rare is the home gardener who at one time or another hasn't experienced that disappointing plague of the tomato patch. Several people who told me of their encounter with this old enemy last season expressed surprise that it's caused by a lack of constant moisture for the root system.

A time-honored method of avoiding this problem is to bury shredded newspapers which have been thoroughly soaked in water in the planting hole when the tomato plants are set out. This will help ensure a continuous supply of moisture at the root level throughout the growing season. For this year, however, just do your best to ensure a consistent supply of moisture is available to your tomato plants.

World oil market slumps from glut

By PETER CALVERT

LONDON (Reuter) — A growing glut of oil has brought a sharp slump in market prices, some of which have fallen below official levels charged by producers, traders reported Wednesday.

Scores of tankers bearing millions of barrels of oil are lying idle off the ports of major consuming countries as their owners seek buyers for their cargoes, traders said.

Prices on the free "spot" markets of London, Rotterdam, Singapore and New York have dropped steadily in recent weeks, they said. Prices for African oils are up to $1.35 U.S. below official levels at between $35 and $37 a barrel.

The turnaround in prices, which have soared by 150 per cent since early 1979, is putting strong pressure for the first time on oil-producing countries to return to a unified, controlled pricing system, the traders believe.

And some producers are being forced to relax premiums they have sought to charge on their oil.

The growth in stocks of oil in industrialized countries, which many traders say are around record levels, is a consequence of recession, fall in demand caused by higher prices, efforts at conservation and unexpectedly mild weather.

With recession worsening, prices on the spot market probably will fall further in the next few months, adding to the squeeze on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), the traders said.

The most dramatic sign of the buildup in oil stocks is off the Gulf coast of the U.S., the world's largest oil importer, where tankers carrying up to 30 million barrels are waiting to unload, the traders said.

"The sea lanes are becoming so crowded, the joke in the market now is that if the tankers were laid end-to-end it would be possible to walk across the Caribbean," one trader commented.

Companies in both Europe and Japan have issued slow steaming orders to their tankers to try to delay oil reaching both areas.

The slump in spot prices for oil so far has hit the income of only a few relatively small producers, such as Dubai and Cameroon, which use the free market, traders said. Most of the world's oil is sold through long-term contracts between the producers and major firms or governments of consuming countries.

Free the hostages: Iran cleric

United Press International

One of Iran's leading clergyman has branded the taking of the U.S. hostages by Moslem militants "illegal," and in a bold challenge to Ayatollah Khomeini, says the Americans in their 257th day of captivity today should be released as soon as possible.

Tehran Radio, meanwhile, announced that security forces are carrying out searches and watching the nation's main highways in an effort to capture more of the plotters involved in last week's abortive coup attempt.

More than 600 people, most of them military personnel, have been rounded up for involvement in the attempt, which the radio said intended to sabotage Iran's oil industry, overthrow Khomeini and install former Prime Minister Shapour Bhaktiar, now in exile in France.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said the plotters will go on trial this week and Iran's so-called "hanging judge", Sheikh Sadegh Khalkhali, who has condemned scores of former agents of the deposed shah and narcotics traffickers to death, said the conspirators would be "shown no mercy."

Hojjatoleslam Ostad Ali Tehrani, known as one of Bani-Sadr's main supporters among the Moslem clergy and one of the creators of Iran's new Islamic constitution, attacked the taking of the hostages in an interview in the Ettelaat newspaper.

Quoting an Arabic verse from the Koran, the Islamic holy book, Tehrani, also a professor, said that Islam taught that agreements were valid until cancelled.

"When we understood that the U.S. diplomats were spies, we should have expelled them," he said.

Tehrani also told the Moslem militants who seized the 52 U.S. hostages Nov 4, "the hostages must be released as fast as possible. I do not agree with any reason to put them on trial."

U.S. giants cleared

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The justice department has exonerated the major oil companies of charges that they deliberately created last year's gasoline shortage in the United States.

The department says in a report issued today that a year-long investigation conducted at President Carter's request failed to show credible evidence that the shortage "was the result of collusive conduct" by the oil companies.

The department claimed shortages were caused by such factors as the Iranian crisis.

Israeli speaker sparks exodus

COPENHAGEN (AP) — At least 40 delegations, led by the Palestinians, walked out of the UN Conference on the Decade for Women today when the Israeli representative rose to speak.

It was the second walkout in three days. On Monday, a similar group left the hall when Jihan Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, addressed the conference.

Both demonstrations were staged in protest of the Israeli-Egyptian peace accords.

The Palestinian delegation, which included Leila Khaled, who gained international notoriety as an air hijacker in the early 1970s, marched silently out of the assembly hall behind a Palestinian flag.

They were followed by Soviet and other Eastern-bloc delegates — except the Romanians — and the representatives of many Third World countries.

The Israeli delegate, Ambassador Hava Hareli, said she was "deeply distressed to hear several delegates attack this peace (the Camp David accords) we have achieved — the first peace in the region."

To loud applause from the remaining 100 delegations, she declared that "several delegations have abused this rostrum with vicious attacks" but she did not intend to respond in the same way.

Winds whip Windsor as U.S. fries

Times News Services

At least seven people received minor injuries Wednesday as the most violent thunderstorm of the season swept through Windsor, Ont., and most parts of surrounding Essex County.

Winds gusting up to 106 kilometres an hour uprooted trees, damaged buildings and at least two small planes at Windsor Airport, capsized two small boats in the Detroit River and knocked down hydro and telephone lines across the city and county.

The weather office said 30.2 millimetres of rain fell in 45 minutes as the storm passed.

Severe thunderstorms and winds gusting more than 150 kilometres an hour also left a path of destruction Wednesday in Michigan, Delaware, Illinois and Wisconsin, ruining millions of dollars of property and causing at least four deaths.

Storms also made mischief at the Republican national convention in Detroit. As George Bush, later named as the vice-presidential candidate, urged Michigan's 82 Republican delegates to vote for Ronald Reagan, the lights and telephones failed. He finished his pitch by candlelight.

Meanwhile, merciless heat continued to scorch a large part of the U.S.

The National Weather Service said some three dozen high temperature records were broken or tied Wednesday. It was the 29th straight day of 38°-plus heat at Del Rio, Texas, and the 25th straight day for Dallas.

Forecasters say the heat siege shows no signs of relenting. At least 828 heat-related deaths have been reported in 19 states since the record temperatures began broiling the southwest and spreading northward and eastward.

The mercury reached 37°degrees Wednesday in New York City. And in Washington, where government workers sweltered in 39° temperatures, the National Weather Service issued a 30-day forecast predicting above-normal temperatures and only light rainfall across most of the United States through mid-August.

In Palmdale, Calif., a wind-whipped brush fire erupted Wednesday in a mountainous area near the Angeles National Forest, charring more than 1,000 acres of tinder dry grass and brush in less than four hours and possibly destroying several homes.

Disneyland stages jazzy birthday show

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Today is Disneyland's 25th birthday, and the world-famous park built by cartoonist Walt Disney is celebrating in customary style, with jazz bands, parades and 25,000 helium balloons.

Birthday festivities began at midnight Wednesday with a special event for 18,000 customers and last for 25 hours straight — the longest the park has ever remained open.

The first-come, first-served guests paid $12.50 apiece for full use of the park's attractions, a meal and entertainment including the Dirt Band and Billy Preston.

Average lifespan heading for 85?

BOSTON (AP) — With new advances in medicine, the average human lifespan will probably peak early in the next century at 85 years, but longer life will remain a fluke of nature, a scientist predicts.

The researcher also maintains that the quality of life in old age will improve, and people will be spared lingering terminal illnesses. Instead, they will simply wear out all at once like Oliver Wendell Holmes' "marvellous one-hoss shay."

In a report in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. James Fries predicted "that the number of very old people will not increase, that the average period of diminished physical vigor will decrease, that chronic disease will occupy a smaller proportion of the typical life span and that the need for medical care in later life will decrease."

Fries, a researcher at the Stanford University Medical Center, argues the length of human life is fixed. Even without disease, people will die as their organs wear out.

He bases his predictions on, among other things, the trend of lengthening lifespans in this century.

Bordello to nunnery for Brandy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A San Francisco woman convicted of running a bordello has been sentenced to 90 days in a convent.

Marlene (Brandy) Baldwin, 39, was convicted last month of pandering after police raided a Forest Hills bordello.

Superior Court Judge Daniel Hanlon on Wednesday placed her in the "care, custody and control" of the Convent of the Good Shepherd here instead of sentencing her to jail.

It reminded defence lawyer Art Groza of what Hamlet said to Ophelia: "Get thee to a nunnery, go."

The order, founded in France 300 years ago to help wayward women, wrote the court a letter offering to accept Brandy at Grace Centre, a counselling clinic.

"I'm trying to get all this behind me," Brandy said later. "I want to put it to rest and write a book about my life."

June Churchill death ruled suicide

LONDON (AP) — June Spencer Churchill, widow of Randolph, son of the late Second World War leader, committed suicide last month by taking an "enormous" overdose of heroin, a London coroner ruled Wednesday. She was 57 and had bone cancer.

Mrs. Churchill, a member of Britain's Voluntary Euthanasia Society, decided to take her own life after being told she could face total paralysis, the coroner said.

Suicide has been legal in Britain since 1961, but "aiding and abetting" suicide is illegal.

Decked out in their dress whites, Belleau Wood crew waits patiently while tugs try the impossible

Anchors no way, no way . . .

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The USS Belleau Wood is capable of streaking through the seas at 24 knots with its potent strike force, but in tight quarters such as Ogden Point the mighty war vessel is at the mercy of the sea and the elements.

The sea served up a fast floodtide Wednesday afternoon while the elements dished up a stiff westerly breeze, and it was enough to prevent the amphibious assault ship (it looks like an aircraft carrier) from docking inside the breakwater.

Despite two valiant tries, five tugs — three from Seaspan International and two from the Canadian Armed Forces — couldn't deliver enough horsepower to swing the Belleau Wood's stern into the easternmost slip at Ogden Point.

After slightly more than an hour of pushing and pulling by the five tugs, the Belleau Wood headed off to anchor in Royal Roads.

The 820-foot ship currently has a crew of 1,200 officers and men and a complement of 300 marines.

According to Jane's Fighting Ships, the Belleau Wood can carry as many as 1,900 marines in addition to a wartime crew of 900.

Her flight deck can operate as many as a dozen Sea Knight helicopters at one time and the hangar deck can accommodate 30 of the attack choppers.

There is also a floodable docking well beneath the after elevator (which transports helicopters between the hangar and flight decks) which is capable of handling four large landing craft.

A large garage has enough room for a reinforced battalion.

On the docking attempt, a Pacific Pilotage Authority spokesman said, "They knew they were going to have a tough job putting her in there even before they got here.

"But they were prepared to have a go at it almost to the point of no return, and they did."

Because the ship's superstructure and bridge are on the starboard side, it was necessary to run the ship in stern first so the bridge would be on the jetty side.

Ordinary ships can come in bow first because their bridges aren't offset to one side.

A Canadian Navy source said the ship was scheduled to tie up at 1 p.m., but the pilotage authority spokesman later reported a pilot was picked up at 1:45 p.m., exactly on schedule.

When the Belleau Wood finally headed for Royal Roads, a band of official welcomers and a Canadian Forces band packed up and left.

In the meantime, the tank landing ships USS Tuscaloosa and USS Cayuga and the dock landing ship USS Fort Fisher had docked at Esquimalt and the first of some 2,500 sailors and marines hit the beaches for a Canadian weekend.

The guided missile cruiser USS William H. Standley arrived in Esquimalt this morning and the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Midgett is due Friday

Canadians-only policy for farm lands in B.C.

B.C.'s agricultural Crown lands will be sold only to Canadians, Lands Minister Jim Chabot announced Wednesday.

The minister would not elaborate on the new policy when asked if the government will move to bar the ownership of other B.C. land by non-Canadians.

"This is a start. What you have asked me is part of a bigger issue and that is a different story."

He also would not say what the government intends to do in other ownership areas, such as recreational land.

The new program will start with sale of 15,000 hectares of Crown farmland to be sold by auction on a lease-to-purchase basis. Sixty-five of the parcels are in the Peace River area with 10 in the Cariboo and one in the south Okanagan.

Under the new policy, successful bidders will have to develop 25 per cent of the land within five years. Under a previous lease-to-purchase system the requirement was that the lessee develop 80 per cent in 10 years, after which the lessee gains title.

Chabot said, "When the conditions have been met and title is given there will be an encumbrance placed on the land that will be registered in land registry offices. The condition, which will be there for all time, will allow only re-sale of the land to Canadians.

"I want to ensure that control of these agricultural lands remains in Canadian hands."

He also said if the land is not already in the agriculture land reserves "it will all be placed there to protect it."

Chabot said he expects there will be two offerings of agricultural land a year in different parts of the province, each about the same size as the first 15,000 hectares.

"For example, I expect to make an offering next year of around 20,000 hectares just in the Fort Nelson area of the Peace River.

Successfull bidders will pay a rental fee to the government of one per cent a year on the appraised value, but if the lessee fails to make his 25-per-cent improvements in five years, the rent escalates to five per cent on a new appraised price, Chabot said.

"In other words, we are saying perform or get out. If the improvements are not made in 10 years he loses the land."

Another change is modification of the rule that restricted disposal of the land only to established farmers.

The minister said the new policy will provide an opportunity for all farmers, including new ones, to apply.

He said the parcels will be large enough to be viable farms and the government plans to sell small parcels of Crown land adjacent to an existing farm on a preferential basis "to that owner if he wants the land and will consolidate it with what he already owns."

The same restrictive resale policy will apply for these lands as well, he said.

Prime dips again

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate dropped to 10.35 per cent today from 10.49 a week earlier, a move which could add pressure on some chartered banks to lower borrowing costs.

Continent's nosiest landlord?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Managers of B.C. government housing have declared themselves defenders of marriage by refusing to accept tenants who cannot provide proof of formal separation from spouses.

The new province-wide policy of the B.C. Housing Management Commission has provoked the ire of Prince Rupert city council, which has voted to send a letter of complaint to Housing Minister Jim Chabot.

"B.C. Housing Management is the only landlord in North America that won't let you move in without a note from home," Alderman Peter Purdy said Wednesday.

The new rule, as stated in the commission's policy manual, refers to applicants for public housing who are separating from their spouses and are residing in the family home.

"Provision of accommodation for one spouse without the other having full knowledge and agreement could be seen as aiding one party only in a marital separation," the manual said.

"The commission cannot be seen to assist in a marriage breakup by the provision of accommodation for one spouse wishing to separate from the other."

Purdy said in a telephone interview council took action after receiving confirmation of the policy in a letter from commission chairman Mary Kerr.

He said council inquired in the housing commission's policy after he received a phone call from a woman, separated from her husband, who had tried to apply for public housing.

The woman was told by commission staff that her application would not be approved unless she submitted a copy of a marriage separation agreement or a letter of permission from her spouse.

Purdy said the policy poses particular difficulties for those who are most likely to need low-cost housing — the woman with children abandoned by her husband and the battered wife wanting to leave.

Meanwhile, Doreen Stewart, manager of the commission's housing allocation department, said the policy was adopted three months ago.

She confirmed that married applicants separating from their spouses are required to provide evidence "to verify they have started formal action" before they can get public housing, but she could not say what the commission would accept as proof.

ICBC listing body shops

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. is arming all its claims offices with lists of body shops in each area that are accepting the corporation's hourly rates for repairs.

The action was initiated Wednesday to counter the growing number of body shop operators who are billing their customers a surcharge over and above the $25.60 hourly rate ICBC set last April.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said today claimants are being issued a pink slip warning them ICBC will not pay more than the set rate and advising them to verify the rate charged by the repair shop of their choice before authorizing any work.

Egby said claimants are also being told they may have trouble finding a shop that will accept the ICBC rate, and in that event the claims office is providing a list of shops that will.

He said shops are crossing the surcharge war battle line at such a rate the list is having to be updated almost hourly.

In Vancouver alone the number of shops on the list Wednesday varied from about 70 to 100.

None of the operators in Greater Victoria have begun to levy surcharges yet.

Some body shop operators are crying foul, accusing ICBC of setting up a blacklist.

U.S. orders inspections of 727, 737, DC-9 engines

By DOUGLAS FEAVER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday it has discovered a serious potential safety defect in the engine that powers two-thirds of U.S. jetliners. It ordered an intensive inspection program that could slow summertime airline operations.

In a legally binding order signed late Wednesday the FAA directed the airlines to inspect the jet engines on Boeing 727s and 737s and McDonnell Douglas DC-9s. The order covers some 4,500 engines on about 1,650 airplanes and will cost the airline industry $10 million to $20 million to carry out, FAA engineering officials estimated.

The inspection order from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration must also be followed in Canada, transport department spokesman David Austin said today.

All major Canadian airlines — including Air Canada, Canadian Pacific and Nordair — fly the McDonnell Douglas planes. They will be asked to inspect the engines within the next 100 flights.

Inspections will be required within varying amounts of time depending on the engine's age and model number.

Inspection requires removal and partial disassembly of the engine to check the suspect part or parts. If no spare engine is available, the down-time on an airplane could run from three to five days, the FAA estimated. The 727 has three engines, the 737 and DC-9 two each.

The engine, built by Pratt £ Whitney, is known as the JT8D and is generally regarded as one of the most

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five people were charged Wednesday with more than 120 counts related to an alleged welfare fraud scheme B.C. ministry of human resources investigators estimate involved as much as $350,000 during five years.

Investigators allege a group of people using fictitious names and forged documents began receiving illegitimate welfare benefits in 1974. The spokesman said that by moving frequently between B.C. and Ontario they continued collecting payments estimated at $150,000 to $350,000.

Paul Todd, 43, and his common-law wife Arna Lee, 37, both of Vancouver, were remanded in provincial court to July 23.

Margaret Lavigne, 66, and her daughters Shirley Sulley, 42, and Joan Kaiser, 44, all of Toronto, were also expected to face charges.

Ford's price was too high

DETROIT (AP) — Gerald Ford wanted a piece of the presidency; a price Ronald Reagan wasn't willing to pay.

So the deal fell through, after negotiations between a would-be president and a one-time president over how to share the power of the Oval Office.

After weeks of vowing not to make a mistake in his first big decision as nominee, Reagan was left looking like a rejected suitor.

And George Bush was exposed as Reagan's second choice.

What happened?

Ford telegraphed his decision when he appeared in two television interviews early Wednesday evening.

Reagan and Bush: what happened?

"If I go to Washington, I have to go there in the belief that I would play a meaningful role," he said. "I would not go to Washington to be a figurehead vice-president."

And yet, the eventual decision was not made until 11:15 p.m. Detroit time when Ford, unaccompanied by anyone other than his Secret Service bodyguard, rode an elevator down from his suite on the 70th floor suite to Reagan's on the 69th.

He and Reagan, antagonists in the 1976 race for the presidential nomination, met for 10 minutes. Ford then returned to his suite and told his aides, then his wife, that it was all off.

"He looked relieved," said one who was there.

At 11:37 p.m. the telephone summoned George Bush. He was offered the brass ring and took it.

On Tuesday night, a handful of Republican party elders were summoned by Reagan. They persuaded him at least to consider teaming up with Ford. Reagan replied they were not the first to advise that no one could do as much to assure his election as Ford.

Commendable charity but fish wasn't theirs

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal fisheries department will have to pay for being generous with someone else's fish, a B.C. Supreme Court judge ruled Wednesday.

What the department will have to pay is 76 sockeye salmon, delivered to the home of Rita McRae of Sardis, near Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley.

The salmon are to replace 76 fish seized when a fisheries officer in the Smithers area of north-central B.C. apprehended Ms. McRae in August, 1978. The department didn't have enough cold storage for 76 fish, so kept two for evidence purposes and sold the other 74 to the Salvation Army for $1 under established policy.

A year later, Fisheries Act charges against Ms. McRae were dropped and when she asked for her fish or compensation, the department offered her the $1.

"Just who in the department's bureaucracy was responsible for creating a policy which so magnanimously disposed of a private citizen's property was not revealed," said Mr. Justice W.J. Wallace. He said it was admitted Ms. McRae was never consulted about disposition of her property.

The judge said a fisheries officer is required to make every effort to obtain as close to the market value as possible for the property being sold.

Bills on post office, information introduced

OTTAWA (CP) — Two pieces of legislation, one that will turn the post office into a Crown corporation and one that will create a freedom-of-information act, were introduced into the Commons today.

Introduction of the bills comes one day before Parliament is expected to recess for the summer which means that they are likely to receive only approval in principle before MPs head home.

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet asked the opposition to study the post office bill over the summer so it could receive quick final approval in the fall.

The opposition House leaders said they were willing to co-operate in speeding the bill through preliminary stages in the Commons but would make no absolute guarantees to do so until they had an opportunity to study provisions of the legislation.

The freedom-of-information bill, introduced by State Secretary Francis Fox, will follow the former Progressive Conservative administration's lead in substantially reducing the type of information the government can keep secret.

Body shop operators cry foul

province, said the action comes as no surprise.

"We fully expected it. ICBC has been manoeuvering for this for some time. They wanted it to happen. I think they are trying to psychologically prepare the public for big rate hikes next year and they want to find someone to blame."

He said that by limiting the number of approved shops, ICBC may wind up creating a massive bottleneck.

"The shops can't handle the volume of business as it is."

Egby said the majority of body shops are accepting the rates.

But Wills said an ARA survey of 300 shops in the Lower Mainland this week showed 94 per cent favored the surcharge action.

The reason more haven't joined is "we've a lot of fence-sitters in this business."

The most vocal opponents of the ICBC rates have been the union shops.

They represent only about six per cent of the total but include the largest firms and handle 30 to 40 per cent of the work.

Last year the corporation paid out about $100 million to body shops in collision and property claims.

Egby denied ARA charges Wednesday that the corporation had refused to negotiate 1980 rates with the operators.

"We set up meetings in January, February and March but they cancelled every one of them without explanation," Egby said.

Said Wills:

"That's just not true. We'd been trying to negotiate 1980 rates but had no luck whatsoever."

He said the ARA had asked ICBC in March to defer making a decision on the rates because union contract talks were still under way.

"They said they were not prepared to wait. I think they jumped the gun and declared the rate on their own."

Wills said the current problems arise out of the failure of an ICBC-sponsored report on the industry commissioned last fall. The report was expected to come up with a rate formula for body shops but it didn't.

Blacks hijack school bus as Miami continues to boil

MIAMI (AP) — Simmering racial tensions entered a third day today with the commandeering of a school bus by eight blacks shortly before dawn. Overnight, two women, including a pregnant teen-ager, were shot and a policewoman was injured in the city's riot-torn Liberty City district.

"It's quiet but not everybody has gone home," police spokesman Thomas Banks said this morning. "We still have a few idiots running around out there setting small bonfires." Banks said there also had been reports of sporadic sniper fire.

At 5:45 a.m. a county school bus beginning its morning rounds was taken over by eight blacks, two adults and six juveniles, said police spokesman Ray Southerland.

They were detained at a police checkpoint in the predominantly-black Liberty City area when officers determined "the situation didn't look right."

Police found a firearm on the bus and arrested all eight people, said Southerland, but the charges were not immediately known.

The female driver, who had remained on the bus, was uninjured, he said. The unidentified driver did not have any passengers on board.

A small arson-caused blaze damaged the James E. Scott Community Centre in Liberty City early today and there was minor looting in the building, said Dade County Police Lieut. Robert Fortney. A gang of black youths also set fire to several railway ties in the area, he said.

Most of a crowd of about 150 black youths roaming the area dispersed when a teen-ager yelled, "Class dismissed!" around 11:30 p.m.

Shortly after midnight, a pregnant white woman was shot in the arm at "point-blank range" by a shotgun loaded with birdshot, officials said.

Banks said 16-year-old Fulgencia Acosta and her husband became lost on their way home to suburban Hialeah and were fired on as they stopped to ask black youths for directions.

Earlier Wednesday, black leaders called off plans to walk the streets in an attempt to calm the racial tensions in neighborhoods still in shambles from May rioting.

That rioting claimed 18 lives and caused millions of dollars in damages. On Tuesday, a white plainclothes policeman and four other Dade County officers were shot and wounded.

Schroeder surgery in August

Legislature Speaker Harvey Schroeder will undergo open heart surgery at St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver the week of Aug. 11, the Social Credit caucus said today.

He suffered a heart attack recently and has been at home since.

Doctors said the recovery time for operations of this type are at least six weeks and could take two or three months.

His office said the Chilliwack MLA hopes to return to work this fall.

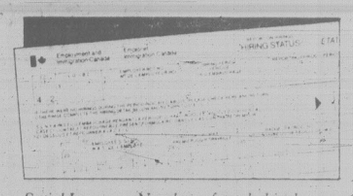
Current standings in the legislature are Social Credit 31 and New Democratic Party 26.

A new way to detect Unemployment Insurance abuse.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that's required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits, and start a new job, please say so on your U-I claimant report card.



Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.
